What Are Your Rights?

Under data protection law, you have certain rights in relation to the processing of your personal data. Below is a list of these rights and what each right means for you.

Right of Access

You may request information about how we process your personal data, including information about:

- why we process your personal data;
- what categories of personal data we process;
- with whom we share your personal data;
- how long we retain your personal data or what criteria are used to determine this period;
- what rights you have;
- where we obtain your personal data from (if we did not obtain it from you);
- whether the processing involves automated decision-making (including profiling);
- if your personal data has been transferred to a country outside the EEA, how we ensure the protection of your personal data.

All of the above information is available in this Privacy Statement. You may also request a copy of the personal data we process about you. Additional copies may be subject to a fee.

Right to Rectification

It is important that we hold accurate information about you, and we ask you to inform us if any of your personal data is incorrect, for example, if you have changed your name or moved to a new address.

Right to Erasure

If we process your personal data unlawfully, for example, if we process your personal data for longer than necessary or without justification, you may ask us to delete your personal data.

Right to Restriction of Processing

From the moment you request the rectification of your personal data or object to its processing, and until we have been able to investigate the issue or confirm the accuracy of your personal data (or amend it in accordance with your instructions), you have the right to request restricted processing.

This means that, except for storing your personal data, we may process your personal data only with your consent, where necessary in connection with legal claims, to protect the rights of another person, or where there is an important public interest in the processing.

You may also request that we restrict the processing of your personal data where the processing is unlawful but you do not want us to erase your personal data.

Right to Object

If you believe that we do not have the right to process your personal data, you may object to our processing. In such cases, we may continue processing your personal data only if we can demonstrate compelling legitimate grounds that override your interests, rights and freedoms.

However, we may always process your personal data where this is necessary for the establishment, exercise or defence of legal claims.

Right to Data Portability

You may request that the personal data you have provided to us, which we process on the basis of your consent or for the performance of a contract, be provided to you in a structured, commonly used and machine-readable format.

You also have the right to request that this information be transmitted to another data controller.

Withdrawal of Consent

Where you have given us your consent for a particular processing activity, such consent is voluntary and you have the right to withdraw it at any time and by any means.

We will also inform any entities to which we were authorised to provide your personal data about your request. If you have any concerns, you have the right to lodge a complaint under Section 100 of the Data Protection Act with the competent supervisory authority, for example via www.dataprotection.gov.sk.

How Can I Complain About the Use of My Data or Exercise My Rights?

If you wish to make a complaint about how we process your personal data, including in relation to the rights described above, you may contact our Data Protection Officer (“DPO”), and your concerns and requests will be reviewed.

If you are not satisfied with our response, or you believe that we process your data unfairly or unlawfully, you may lodge a complaint with the competent supervisory authority, which is the Office for Personal Data Protection (ÚOOÚ). Further information about the Office for Personal Data Protection and its complaint procedure can be found here: www.dataprotection.gov.sk.

Contact Details

If you have any further questions regarding the processing of your personal data, you may contact us through our Data Protection Officer (“DPO”) by sending an email to: privacy@danubepay.com.
