

Jeff Lockyer

Consultant & Coach

Jeff is thrilled to be a part of The Imperfect Leadership Movement of OrgHealth, because—in his own words—he’s an imperfect leader himself!

“Equipped with extensive first-chair experience of his own, Jeff brings tremendous understanding and empathy to bear as he’s coaching leaders through the challenges they face. His ability to see the big picture while understanding the organizational forces at play allows him to bring clarity and insight to help his clients move forward. Jeff can be instrumental in transforming your organization into a healthy and powerful force in the world.”

– Matt Lensink, CEO

Jeff has spent nearly three decades in non-profit leadership, where he expanded his organization’s capacity over thirtyfold. Through building a high-talent executive team (including his successors) and a high-trust board, the organization has become a model across North America for effectively operationalizing compassion and justice. In 2021, Jeff released a book describing his organization’s journey, that inspires others to become significant social assets in their communities.

In addition, Jeff served on and chaired the board of a national leadership development organization for nearly twenty years—envisioning, equipping, and encouraging both business and non-profit leaders. This has led to conference and workshop speaking, podcast hosting, as well as a frequent guest of the Best Christian Workplaces podcast, where he has shared his personal experiences as both a champion and subject of organizational health reforms.

A former national team long-distance runner, Jeff brings a passion for the high-performance power of investing in organizational health. His decades of experience as a first-chair leader provides a rare combination of both empathy and clarity to both executive teams and boards that supports actionable change and growth for the future.
