You make CPP contributions based on pensionable earnings. Contributions start after you earn a set minimum amount (the year's basic exemption), and continue to a set maximum amount (the year's maximum pensionable earnings).

You and your employer each contribute equal amounts on your pensionable earnings. If you are self-employed, you pay both the employer and employee amounts.

This Canada Pension Plan (CPP) statement of contributions shows your total contributions for each year. Your contributions are based on your pensionable earnings.

This statement also provides an estimate of what your benefits would be if you and/or your beneficiaries were eligible today. To receive CPP benefits, you must apply.

You can find more information about the CPP and the statement of contributions on the last page.
