STATEMENT

My work refers to that personal and unique space where the visible and the invisible, technique and concept meet.

I construct a plastic story about the nature of memory and how it influences our perception of existence through wefts and forms that evoke what is no longer there, but still survives.

I use textile layers with their transparencies, textures, nuances and subtleties, which become metaphors for time, loss and permanence.

Each piece is structured by means of frames that not only support, but also fragment and reconfigure the work into polyptychs that interact with each other, a single image divided into multiple planes, like memories that are reconstructed from different situations and moments.
