

In the remote location of Coyote Buttes lies one of Arizona's treasures. The Wave is a remarkable rock formation made of eroded sandstone in colour patterns ranging from earth tones to white, its wavy layers the result of slow wind and rain erosion over hardened Navajo sandstone dunes. The Wave is absolutely surreal with its undulating patterns and inspired the creation of the Arizona mirror. Formed by layers of noble materials such as marble, brass and bronze mirror that resemble the sandy shades of the rocky formation, Arizona recreates the natural forces of the place through the layering of materials and the sensuality of its infinite curves.
