Yancy Gamboa

Designer II

Yancy is a designer who approaches design with boundless enthusiasm and inquisitiveness. He understands that each project has unique needs and requires new solutions. Yancy believes that architecture should capture the essence of the community it serves and redefine the way people interact with the built environment. By supporting various projects ranging from architecture to landscape design and community engagement, he has developed the technical and creative skills required to serve our communities better. Currently, Yancy is working towards obtaining his architecture license and NCARB certification. Yancy is engaged in self-directed learning, delving into building information modeling and 3D visualization techniques to enhance his skills further and obtain certification in BIM management. Yancy holds a Bachelor of Architecture from the University of Southern California, where he developed a strong foundation in architectural design. When not immersed in Revit, you can find him at home working in Revit. Just kidding, you can find him catching a plane to new cities, singing his heart out at karaoke, or maintaining his 490-day streak on Duolingo.
