

July 2025

To Whom It May Concern,

The National Association for Public Health Statistics and Information Systems (NAPHSIS) will host its biennial Identity & Security Conference on December 1–2, 2025, at the Gaylord National Harbor Hotel. This highly anticipated event brings together leaders and innovators in vital records, identity verification, data modernization, digital issuance, and fraud prevention.

With data modernization and digital issuance at the forefront of public health and identity management, this year's conference promises to be especially impactful. Attendees will benefit from a robust agenda featuring keynote presentations, expert panels, and interactive sessions that explore the evolving landscape of identity and security.

One of the highlights of the 2025 conference will be a powerful keynote, Len Noe - author and ethical hacker, and panel discussions on fraud and security, offering insights into current threats and innovative solutions being implemented across jurisdictions. Additionally, the Digital Issuance Committee will present its comprehensive plan for the first time, providing attendees with a detailed look at the future of secure, digital vital records issuance.

The conference is designed to foster collaboration among state vital records offices, federal partners, and private sector experts. Sessions will focus on:

- Practical strategies for secure data exchange
- Emerging technologies in identity verification
- Real-world case studies of successful implementations
- Policy development and best practices

Participants will also have the opportunity to engage in peer-to-peer discussions, share challenges, and contribute to shaping the future of identity and security in vital records.

Whether you're a returning attendee or joining for the first time, the NAPHSIS Identity & Security Conference offers a unique platform to learn, connect, and lead in the vital records and identity management community.

Sincerely,

Shae Sutton, PhD
