2. Psalm 122:1 - "I rejoiced with those who said to me, 'Let us go to the house of the Lord.'" This verse expresses the joy and excitement of going to the house of the Lord, which can inspire the audience to return to church with a similar mindset.

Language suggestions:

If you want to add depth to your sermon, you can explore the original languages of the Scripture passages you included. For example:

- In Hebrews 10:25, the phrase "meeting together" comes from the Greek word "episunagoge," which can also be translated as "assembly" or "gathering." This highlights the communal aspect of coming back to church and emphasizes the importance of being part of a larger body of believers.

- In Psalm 122:1, the word "rejoiced" in Hebrew is "samach," which conveys a sense of joy, gladness, and celebration. This can be used to emphasize the joyous nature of returning to the house of the Lord.

Additional Scripture verses:

Consider including the following verses to support your message:

1. Matthew 18:20 - "For where two or three gather in my name, there am I with them."

This verse highlights the presence of Jesus when believers gather together, reinforcing the significance of coming back to church.

2. Acts 2:42 - "They devoted themselves to the apostles' teaching and to fellowship, to the breaking of bread and to prayer." This verse showcases the early believers' commitment to gathering together for teaching, fellowship, and worship, providing a biblical example for the importance of returning to church.

Remember to tailor these suggestions to fit your sermon's flow and the specific needs of your congregation.
