Topic: Justification Brings Peace

Romans 5 is a great starting point for your sermon on justification and peace. Here are some suggestions to help you move forward:

1. Expand on the concept of peace:

- Explore the different dimensions of peace that come through justification by faith in Jesus Christ. For example, peace with God, peace within ourselves, and peace with others.
- Use additional Scripture passages to support this idea, such as Isaiah 26:3, John 14:27, and Philippians 4:7.

2. Highlight the benefits of justification:

- Explain how justification not only brings peace but also brings freedom from guilt, reconciliation with God, and the assurance of eternal life.
- Include relevant verses like Romans 8:1, 2 Corinthians 5:18-19, and John 3:16.

3. Address potential doubts or misconceptions:

- Acknowledge that some may struggle with the concept of being justified by faith alone. Address common objections and provide biblical responses.

- Use passages like Ephesians 2:8-9, Galatians 2:16, and Titus 3:5 to emphasize that salvation is a gift received through faith, not by our own works.

4. Explore the transformative power of justification:

- Discuss how justification leads to a changed life and the empowerment to live a righteous and holy life through the indwelling of the Holy Spirit.
- Incorporate verses like Romans 6:4, Galatians 5:22-23, and 2 Corinthians 5:17.

5. Offer practical application:

- Provide practical suggestions on how believers can experience and maintain the peace that comes from justification. This could include prayer, studying God's Word, cultivating a relationship with Christ, and seeking reconciliation with others.
- Encourage your congregation to trust in God's promises and live out their faith in their daily lives.

Remember to use language that is accessible to your audience and consider explaining any original language terms or concepts that may enhance their understanding.
