The Pelican Table

The Pelican Table

The only known version of the Pelican Table was showcased alongside the Pelican Chair at the Copenhagen Cabinetmakers' Guild Exhibition in 1940. Both pieces are standout examples of Finn Juhl's profound affinity with modern art. However, the table was never put into production. It reappeared at an auction in Paris nearly 75 years later, allowing for the accurate design and measurements of the table to be finally determined. The Pelican Table is now manufactured in oak, walnut, Oregon pine, or painted in black.
