

The Norman Conquest

Pupil booklet

Introduction

By the end of this unit, you will be able to answer the question:

Why did William win the Battle of Hastings?

Each part has 3 resources to help you build your understanding of the Battle of Hastings and the Norman Conquest.

1

A short recording from BBC Teach to give some background

2

An extract from 'The Norman Conquest' by Marc Morris

3

An image to help us understand more about what was happening at the time

4

Questions and reflections

Links to 'The Norman Conquest' by Marc Morris

Ebook here

Hard copy here

Knowledge organiser

Word / Phase	Explanation
Allegiance	Loyalty or commitment of a subordinate to a superior or of an individual to a group or cause (The earl swore allegiance to him as his new sovereign).
Alliance	A joining together for some common purpose
Anglo-Saxon	The people who lived in England before the Norman Conquest.
Battle of Hastings	The decisive battle in 1066 where William of Normandy defeated Harold Godwinson.
Bayeux Tapestry	A long embroidered cloth depicting the events of the Norman Conquest.
Candidacy	The state of being a candidate
Claimant	A person who makes a claim, especially to property or a title. Someone stating they have a right to something.
Confessor	Person who hears confessions and gives absolution (ex Edward the Confessor, as he was very religious)
Consequences	Result or effect of an action or condition (e.g., The consequences of the Norman Conquest).
Contender	A person or group competing for a prize, position, or power (e.g., a contender for the throne).
Coronation	The act of crowning a king
Domesday Book	A record of a survey of English lands and possessions made in 1086 for tax purposes.
Exile	The state of being barred from one's native country, typically for political or punitive reasons.

Knowledge organiser

Word / Phase	Explanation
Feudalism	The dominant social system in medieval Europe, in which the nobility held lands from the Crown in exchange for military service, and vassals were in turn tenants of the nobles, while the peasants (villeins or serfs) were obliged to live on their lord's land and give him homage, labor, and a share of the produce, notionally in exchange for military protection.
Fortification	A defensive wall or other reinforcement built to strengthen a place against attack.
Fulford Bridge	A battle where Harald Hardrada and Tostig took on the Anglo-Saxons before being defeated in Stamford Bridge.
Godwinson	Last Anglo-Saxon king of England (Harold Godwinson)
Heir	A person legally entitled to the property or rank of another on that person's death.
Invasion	An act of entering a country or region with armed forces.
Normandy	A region in Northern France, home to the Normans.
Normans	People from Normandy in France who invaded and conquered England in 1066.
Rebellion	An act of violent or open resistance to an established government or ruler.
Resistance	The refusal to accept or comply with something; an effort to stop or prevent something.
Stamford Bridge	Site of a battle in 1066 where Harold Godwinson defeated the Vikings.
Survey	Gathering Information (ex the king needed information to determine taxes)

Knowledge organiser

Word / Phase	Explanation
Throne	The chair upon which a monarch sits and symbolizes the monarchy.
Usurpation	Taking someone's power or property by force (Was his accession a legitimate act or a usurpation?).
Vikings	Scandinavian warriors who raided and traded throughout Europe.
Witan	The Anglo-Saxon council that advised the king. They helped choose the next king.

Table of Contents

Step 1: Four Contenders for the English Crown	7
Step 2: The Battle of Fulford	13
Step 3: The Battle of Stamford Bridge	19
Step 4: The Battle of Hastings	25
Step 5: Revolt and resistance after the Norman Conquest	31
Step 6: Conclusion	37

01

Four Contenders for the English Crown

1. CLAIMANTS TO THE THRONE

1.1 Video

When Edward the Confessor died in 1066, four people - Edgar Aethling, Harald Hardrada, Harold Godwinson and William of Normandy - had all been promised the throne at one stage during Edward's reign.

Who had the strongest claim?

And which of them would the Witan, the Anglo-Saxon council, select?

It was very dangerous for a country when the King died without a clear heir to the throne, so swift action was needed.

Harold Godwinson was chosen as king on the very day that Edward was buried.

But how would the other three claimants to the throne react?

Link to BBC Teach: Who were the claimants to the throne in 1066?

1.2 Text extract

Chapter 9 – The Gathering Storm

Read from the start of the chapter on page 131 and read to page 135

How and why did Harold Godwineson come to succeed Edward the Confessor? What of the candidacy of Edgar Ætheling, son of Edward the Exile, whose claim by birth was manifestly superior? Had Harold long intended to wear his brother-in-law's crown, or did he accept it only at the last minute, in deference to the king's dying wishes?...

...it remains striking that our best-informed source for the Confessor's death is so reticent on the crucial subject of who he wanted to succeed him.

1.3 Image

This scene on the Bayeux Tapestry shows Edward talking with Harold and other nobles.

Edward is on his deathbed, and he looks weak. He is giving his last instructions and blessing.

He may be making a final decision or giving a special promise about who should be king after him.

This scene is important because it shows how Edward's dying words and the promises he made had an impact on what happened next.

It leads to a big fight over who should be king—Harold or William—and eventually the Battle of Hastings.

A link to the Bayeux Tapestry online

1.4 Questions and reflections

It's helpful to make a summary of what you have learnt so far using the points below:

- It was a confusing and dangerous time when Edward the Confessor died because there were four men who believed they had the right to be king.
- Jot some brief notes on the four men:
 - Edgar Aethling.....
 - Harald Hardrada....
 - Harold Godwinson
 - William of Normandy....
- Marc Morris, the historian, says that there are no clear answers, and one of the reasons was that there were no hard and fast rules about who should become king.

Your notes here

History

02

The Battle of Fulford

2. THE BATTLE OF FULFORD

2.1 Video

Having been made king following Edward the Confessor's death in 1066, Harold Godwinson was waiting for an invasion in the south, from Normandy.

When no invasion arrived he disbanded his army and returned to London. But there was an invasion, from Scandinavia.

Here we have a detailed account of the first battle, at Fulford, between the contenders for the throne of England, in September, where Harald Hardrada and Tostig took on the northern army of the Anglo-Saxons led by Earl Morcar and Earl Edwin, defeated them and then captured York.

Link to BBC Teach: 1066 - The Battle of Fulford

2.2 Text extract

Chapter 10 – The Thunderbolt

Read from page 160 to page 162

Hardrada had come in great force to conquer England and make himself its new ruler. On his arrival, says the Chronicle, the earl swore allegiance to him as his new sovereign...

...The English king, says the Chronicle, 'marched northwards day and night, as quickly as he could assemble his levies'.

2.3 Image

The arrival of King Harald Hardrada of Norway and his defeat of the Saxons at Fulford, near York.

From The Life of King Edward the Confessor illustrated by the Benedictine monk Matthew Paris in the 13th century.

The original 'Vie de seint Aedward le Rei' is in Cambridge University, more information here.

2.4 Questions and reflections

It's helpful to make a summary of what you have learnt so far using the points below:

Marc Morris says that the invaders timed their arrival to perfection. There were plenty of twists and turns!

Write some of the reasons below:

- King Harold had been expecting an invasion from
- When this didn't happen, King Harold...
- This meant that Harald Hardrada...

Your notes here

History

3

A large white rectangular area with horizontal lines, intended for taking notes. The lines are evenly spaced and extend across the width of the area.

03

The Battle of Stamford Bridge

An illustration of King Harold Godwinson, shown from the chest up in profile, looking towards the left. He is wearing a dark, patterned tunic and a brown cloak. His right hand is resting on a wooden shield decorated with a dragon emblem. Behind him is a dense line of spears, their points creating a jagged silhouette against a bright, hazy background. The overall tone is dramatic and historical.

3. THE BATTLE OF STAMFORD BRIDGE

3.1 Video

The Battle of Stamford Bridge was the second September battle in 1066, between King Harold of England and King Harald of Norway and Tostig. The Anglo-Saxon army had marched all the way from London to Stamford Bridge - near York - in only five days, and managed to catch the invaders unprepared.

Harald and Tostig arrived in Northern England in 300 ships, but only 24 were needed to take the survivors, including Harald's son Olaf, home to Norway.

Two of the contenders for the throne were killed at Stamford Bridge, leaving only William in a position to challenge Harold Godwinson.

Link to BBC Teach: 1066 The Battle of Stamford Bridge

3.2 Text extract

Chapter 10 – The Thunderbolt

Read from page 163 to the end of the chapter.

Having been favourably received in York and won the support of its citizens, the Norwegians withdrew to their ships at Riccall. Before they set out to conquer the south, however, it had been agreed that there would be another meeting, at which hostages from the rest of Yorkshire would be handed over....

...Two days after the battle, however, the wind changed direction.

3.3 Image

Just three weeks before the English lost to the Normans at Hastings, King Harold's army won a decisive victory over Viking invaders at Stamford Bridge near York.

From 2015 to 2021 a team of volunteer stitchers produced a tapestry that rivals the Bayeux tapestry.

Heather Cawte's book tells the story of the Battle of Stamford Bridge and of the new tapestry, which is now permanently housed at Stamford Bridge itself.

The panels can be viewed online at The Battle of Stamford Bridge Tapestry Project.

3.4 Questions and reflections

It's helpful to make a summary of what you have learnt so far using the points below:

Marc Morris says that the Norwegians had gone to Stamford Bridge wearing their helmets and carrying their weapons, but without their mail shirts, because the weather was warm and sunny.

What were the other reasons why they were not fully armed and expecting to fight?

Your notes here

History

A large white rectangular area with horizontal grey lines, intended for taking notes.

04

The Battle of Hastings

4.1 Video

In late September 1066 the winds change direction and William of Normandy finally arrives in Sussex for the decisive battle against the Anglo Saxon army led by King Harold.

Harold's army has raced south from Yorkshire to fight the Normans.

They meet on a hill in Sussex and a long, bitter, battle takes place before Harold is killed and William is the victor.

Link to BBC Teach: 1066 The Battle of Hastings

4.2 Text extract

Chapter 11 – Invasion

Read from the start of Chapter 11 to the end of the chapter.

If we believe William of Poitiers, the late summer of 1066 must have been a time of immeasurable frustration for the duke of Normandy and his army of would-be invaders....

...Harold's death had been down to the judgement of God.

4.3 Image

The phrase "Hic Harold rex interfectus est" is a key element of the Bayeux Tapestry's narrative.

The scene depicts a warrior with an arrow in his eye, and the inscription above him states, "Here King Harold is killed".

4.4 Questions and reflections

It's helpful to make a summary of what you have learnt so far using the points below:

The battle was close. These are some of the elements:

- Harold's army had travelled hundreds of miles. They are likely to have been exhausted
- The difference between the weapons the two armies used. The Norman used horses in battle which had the advantage of, while the Anglo-Saxon weapons

Marc Morris is interested in how the English sources and the French sources give different accounts of the size of the armies on each side. Why do you think the sources might emphasise different aspects?

Your notes here

History

A large white rectangular area with horizontal grey lines, intended for taking notes.

05

Revolts and resistance after the Norman Conquest

REVOLT AND RESISTANCE

5.1 Video

This video is an exploration of Anglo-Saxon resistance to Norman rule after William's coronation on Christmas Day in 1066.

William was particularly severe in putting down a rebellion in the North of England.

Perhaps the most determined rebellion was led by Hereward the Wake, supported by some Danish invaders, in the Fens of East Anglia in 1070 -1071 but even that, too, is defeated by William, with the help of a wooden tower, a witch and some monks.

Link to BBC Teach: Anglo-Saxon revolt and resistance

5.2 Text extract

Chapter 13 – Insurrection

Start at page 228 and read to the end of the chapter.

William had been fighting a desperate campaign, dragged here and there across the country in pursuit of his enemies and still unable to defeat them. Orderic tells us that once the king had entered York he assigned men to begin rebuilding the castles....

...as the eternal law makes clear to all men.

5.3 Image

The Normans burning Anglo-Saxon buildings, in a scene from the Bayeux Tapestry. This likely relates to the destruction of homes in Dover when the Norman army first arrived.

It's evidence of the brutality of the invasion and the later repression in the north.

5.4 Questions and reflections

It's helpful to make a summary of what you have learnt so far using the points below:

While William won the Battle of Hastings, that did not mean that his position was safe. There were many uprisings, including in the north and east of England.

William put down these rebellions with increasing harshness.

These are some examples of what happened to the parts of the country that revolted:

- In the north, we are told that...
- In the East, Hereward the Wake...

Your notes here

History

A large white rectangular area with horizontal grey lines, intended for taking notes.

06

Why did William win the Battle of Hastings?

Conclusion

Let's draw the threads together of what we've learnt so that we can answer this question:

Why did William win the Battle of Hastings?

When Edward the Confessor died without an heir, it caused a crisis. Of the four men who could be king, Aethling did not have much hope. This was because he was young and did not have enough support. This left three contenders:

- Harold
- Hardrada
- William

After Edward died, Harold was crowned king the next day. But this did not mean that his position was safe. What happened next affected who won the Battle of Hastings.

First, Harold had to deal with Harald Hardrada.

The initial battle at Fulford did not go well for the English because Hardrada together with Harold's brother Tostig had a larger army. They pushed the English back and took the city of York.

The battle at Stamford Bridge was won by Harold. However, it meant that the men were tired.

They had to turn south again because William had arrived with a large army from Normandy.

Conclusion

The final battle was not straightforward. These are some of the key points that Marc Morris raises:

- The English started off in a stronger position
- William took risks, such as pretending to retreat and these paid off
- The battle was fierce and lasted most of the day, with both sides suffering heavy losses. Marc Morris comments on the brutal nature of medieval combat.

It could be argued that William won the Battle of Hastings because he was the better leader. Here are some examples:

- William invaded with an army and 2000 horses
- He used the tactic of the false retreat to lure English troops off the ridge
- When it looked as though the Normans were going to lose, he raised his helmet to encourage them to fight on

Harold was also unlucky:

- He'd been expecting the Normans to invade, but they had been delayed by the weather and Harold needed to fight at Stamford Bridge.
- While Harold won the Battle of Stamford Bridge, his men would have been exhausted from the long trek to the north and back to the south coast.
- The fierce battle could have gone either way, but once Harold was killed, the English lost heart and fled from the battle.

You have also learnt that the Battle of Hasting was not the end of the story and that rebellions resulted in devastation in the north.

Conclusion

Now in your own words, answer the question::

‘Why did William win the Battle of Hastings?’

You might find the mind map helpful to organise your ideas.

Mind Map

Your notes here

History

A large white rectangular area with horizontal grey lines, intended for taking notes.

Mary Myatt

I am a former teacher. Nowadays I talk with pupils, teachers and leaders about learning, leadership and the curriculum. My conversations with pupils have led me to believe that you enjoy demanding work, as long as you are helped to understand it. We've found that one of the best ways to do this is through a high quality text. I hope you enjoy working in this way.

Key Stage 3:
The Ambitious Years

Resource produced by

v8 July 2026