Booklet by Mark Enser

Watch

- BBC 'Tribe with Bruce Parry' – Nenets episode: Bruce Parry joins nomadic reindeer-herders on the Yamal Peninsula in northern Siberia for their winter migration. Extends Part 4 (different indigenous group to the Even people in the extract, but the same reindeer-herding way of life).
- NASA Earth Observatory – free, public-domain satellite imagery of the Arctic and sub-Arctic; useful for visualising scale and physical geography across all five parts.

Listen

- Malachy Tallack is also a folk-rock singer-songwriter; his own music (also on Bandcamp/Spotify) reflects Shetland and northern landscapes and gives a sense of the author's own voice and sense of place.

Read

- Kathleen Jamie, 'Sightlines' – Scottish nature writing exploring islands, landscape and the far north; a natural extension of the Shetland material in Part 1. Available to borrow from most libraries.
- Barry Lopez, 'Arctic Dreams' – a classic account of landscape, people and wildlife in the Arctic; referenced within Tallack's own book and a strong extension for Parts 2 and 4. Available to borrow from most libraries.
- 'Shetland's top archaeological sites' – covers Jarlshof and other Neolithic farming sites, extending the Part 1 extract with real archaeological evidence.
- 'The race for Greenland's rare earth minerals is heating up' – an up-to-date look at the real mining and mineral-rights conflict discussed in Part 2.
- 'Finnish everyman's rights - the right to roam & enjoy nature' – an official, clearly written explanation of the law at the centre of Part 5.
