CHAMONIX

HÔTEL MONT-BLANC À CHAMONIX

A legendary address

In both summer and winter, Hôtel Mont-Blanc is the prestigious, must-stay address in the Chamonix Valley.

This elegant residence offers every comfort and amenity to make your stay as enjoyable as possible.

But beyond that, this historic property has that extra touch of charm that makes the experience truly unique, set in the heart of a town that lives to the rhythm of one of the world's most extraordinary high-mountain landscapes.

Reinventing the Art of Getaway

It's hard to find anywhere else a playground as extraordinary for mountain enthusiasts. The Aiguille du Midi, the Mer de Glace, the Vallée Blanche, names that echo like legends, evoking great expeditions, pushing one's limits, and respecting a fascinating natural world. And at the heart of this breathtaking landscape stands one of the flagship properties of the H8 Invest group.

The art of leisurely living was invented in Chamonix at the beginning of the 20th century. In that light-hearted era, in 1849, Hôtel Mont-Blanc rose from the ground, proud and stately, crowned by the highest peaks of the Alps. It offered a haven of comfort, a gentle contrast to the sometimes harsh surrounding nature. During the Belle Époque, aristocratic families, far from idle, discovered skiing, snowshoeing, and bobsleigh. Elegant women dared to wear fitted trousers, to the great dismay of the gentlemen. The first ski lifts, the first climbing routes, the first Winter Olympic Games in 1924... Chamonix became the very first international mountain resort.

The decades went by, and great adventurers such as Roger Frison-Roche and Maurice Herzog shared their passion for the mountains. No one stays here by chance. That is the incomparable charm of Chamonix : to be, far more than to appear.

“Imagine enormous prisms of ice, white, green, violet, azure, depending on the rays of the sun that strike them. The Mer de Glace, the Drus. And torrents, waterfalls, storms, avalanches, so that all the sounds of the Alps unfolded through the valley.”

Victor Hugo, Fragment of a Journey to the Alps, 1831

Reaching the Summits

Staying at Mont-Blanc means treating yourself to a true valley institution, right in the heart of the town.

Since 1849, this iconic hotel has welcomed a cosmopolitan clientele from all over the world, drawn here to experience the highest peak in Europe. Ideally located just steps from the main street, the Chamonix landmark reveals its white façade and blue shutters.

From the rooms and suites, guests can admire the breathtaking panorama of the highest peaks.

On one side, the Drus rise behind a forest of fir trees; on the other, the imposing Bossons Glacier lies at the foot of Mont Blanc.

Hôtel Mont-Blanc rekindles the splendor of Chamonix's Belle Époque palaces

Inside the hotel, guests rediscover the elegance of the palaces that emerged in Chamonix in the early 19th century, when the resort welcomed a wealthy international clientele seeking the very first winter sports holidays. The 5-star hotel has been entirely renovated by interior designer Sybille de Margerie, drawing inspiration from the surrounding nature and mountain environment.

The rooms open onto a magnificent panorama of peaks, offering space, luxury and comfort. Savoyard-inspired woodwork, black-and-white checkerboard marble, bespoke furniture, carefully selected materials and vibrant touches of color create a warm, joyful atmosphere. Around the monumental staircase with its noble ironwork, the lounges and communal spaces offer families and friends inviting places to gather after a mountain hike or a day on the slopes.

The 41 rooms, including 18 junior suites, two 75 m² suites and a 100 m² Penthouse Suite, play with warm tones and rich textures to embrace the winter cold.

Each morning, the hotel offers the joy of waking up to the most beautiful of summits: Mont Blanc itself. And the luckiest guests can admire this eternal spectacle from one of the many balconies that grace the façade.

BIEN-ÊTRE

Rejuvenate at our Spa by Clarins

After the exhilaration of the peaks, nothing compares to slipping into the heated outdoor pool, open year-round and stretching 14 meters long, with its breathtaking views of the Mont Blanc massif.

Unless you prefer to unwind in the 250 m² spa and its hammam.

A sauna, experience shower, high-tech fitness equipment and treatments designed by the experts at Clarins offer countless opportunities to breathe, unwind and let go.

RESTAURANT LE MATAFAN

The mountains as inspiration, creativity as our signature

“At Le Matafan, I offer a cuisine that returns to the essentials — refined, flavourful, and always with a nod to the local gastronomy.”

— Mickey Bourdillat, the restaurant’s chef.

Beneath the glass roof sits the chef’s table. The gaze sweeps across the Mont Blanc massif. Appetite awakens, no doubt stirred by the fresh mountain air and the joyful palette of colours, flowers, and fresh herbs.

The vitality of mountain folk is surely contagious. In their presence, Chef Mickey Bourdillat’s cuisine gains strength and delivers an honest, generous pleasure. Woodlands, meadows, alpine pastures, the landscape inspires, and the recipes follow the seasons naturally and abundantly.

Like the famous potato galette that “beats hunger” and gave its name to the restaurant: Le Matafan.

In such a spectacular setting, there is no need for theatrics, only the art of taming the wild with finesse, using seasonal ingredients. Respecting tradition, yes, but never boredom. Mickey Bourdillat does not limit his inspiration to the finest products of the French Alpine valleys. His cuisine is a journey through the Alps, the Aosta Valley, and even the Mediterranean Basin.

Who could resist the Fontina fondue with local chanterelles and garlic croutons? Or the delicacy of Lake Geneva féra with braised endives scented with citrus and chicory jus ?

Every dish on the seasonal menu is an invitation to sharing and conviviality, values cherished by mountain folk and by the chef himself.

H8-INVEST

Jean-Philippe Cartier is a self-taught entrepreneur and a distinctive figure in the ecosystem of French serial entrepreneurs.

He spent part of his youth in Mont-Saint-Aignan in Normandy before continuing his schooling in Val-de-Marne. From an early age, he had one obsession: gaining his independence and becoming an entrepreneur without waiting. At eighteen, he left school to enter the working world.

A visionary, he quickly established himself as a pioneer of the digital sphere. In 1998, he founded his first company, AutoReflex.com, one of the leading online platforms for automotive classifieds, with nothing more than ten thousand euros and a great deal of boldness.

A few years later, this initial success was crowned by the sale of the site to Mondadori / Axel Springer. Building on this experience, he created his investment holding company, H8 Invest, in 2008, with the ambition of supporting the growth of companies in promising and diverse sectors.

Driven by H8 Invest, Jean-Philippe multiplied investments, acquisitions, and new ventures. His scope of action extended into culture, with the co-production of Maurice Béjart's Best Of or the acquisition of the legendary music hall Bobino, into media with the purchase of MFM radio in 2010, and into luxury craftsmanship through the takeover of the historic Lavabre Cadet glove-making house in Millau. He also invested in iconic restaurants such as Coco at the Opéra Garnier, and the Grand Café (Loulou Group), located within the Grand Palais since June 2025.

Passionate about technology, he remained true to his first interests by becoming an early investor in October (formerly Lendix), the European leader in participatory financing, alongside his friend Olivier Goy. In recent years, he has carried out around fifteen significant investments in fields ranging from biotech, with Avrion Therapeutics, committed to fighting neurodegenerative diseases, to innovative food concepts (The French Bastards, Brique House), digital solutions (Sunday, the app revolutionizing restaurant payments), sustainability (Kipli, responsible bedding and furniture), and fashion with CQFD Paris, a French luxury womenswear brand that is inclusive and fully digital. He is also a shareholder of the investment fund 123 IM, which manages €1.3 billion deployed exclusively within French SMEs.

Deeply attached to France and its heritage, Jean-Philippe Cartier has never left his home country. He invests extensively in the hospitality sector with a clear vision: to revive "sleeping beauties" and build a collection of character hotels in exceptional locations. Among them are Hôtel Mont-Blanc in Chamonix, facing the roof of Europe, and Le Mas Candille in Mougins, in the heart of the Riviera, in partnership with the Courtin-Clarins family. In 2021, he also acquired the legendary Hôtel Flaubert in Trouville with producer Pierre-Antoine Capton, and together they created the Prix Flaubert, a literary prize chaired by author David Foenkinos.

Through each of his projects, Jean-Philippe Cartier champions responsible and ambitious entrepreneurship, attuned to his era and firmly committed to enhancing the influence and economic vitality of France.
