A Strategic Framework for Consent-Led Customer Interactions

The DPDP Act is redefining customer engagement by placing consent at its core. Businesses must ensure every communication and data usage is compliant, traceable, and transparent. But most organizations struggle with siloed systems and inconsistent data practices creating blind spots, compliance risks, and fragmented customer experiences (CX).

By combining robust data management with a centralized consent governance layer, In10s enables enterprises to manage, enforce, and audit consent seamlessly across communication platforms, websites, mobile applications, and backend systems; to ensure DPDP compliance at ease.

The Reality Check: Why Consent Management Can't Wait

With increasing regulatory requirements and customer expectations around privacy, organizations must ensure that personal data is used only with valid and auditable consent.

The Cost of Inaction

The Act mandates strict security safeguards, requiring enterprises to implement robust technical and organizational measures to protect personal data.

Penalty	Particulars of the Violation
! Up to ₹250 Crores	Failure to take reasonable security safeguards to prevent data breach.
! Up to ₹200 Crores	Failure to notify the Board and/or affected Data Principals about a data breach.
