

Building Connections Through Positive Play with Daniel Inman

COURSE

In today's educational landscape, fostering meaningful connections with students is essential for their social and emotional development. Daniel Inman's course, "Building Connections Through Positive Play," offers practical strategies for educators and parents to engage with children using various forms of play, enhancing relationships and promoting well-being.

About This Course

This interactive session focuses on:

Play-Based Connection Techniques:

Discover diverse play methods to connect with children in one-on-one and small group settings.

Practical Applications:

Learn simple, enjoyable activities that can be implemented immediately to build quick and meaningful connections with individuals of all ages.

Adaptability Across Age Groups:

Understand how to tailor play strategies to suit different developmental stages, ensuring effective engagement.

About the Presenter:

Daniel Inman is an international school counsellor based in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, with over 15 years of experience working with students across various age groups. His background in physical education and movement has equipped him with a range of strategies to build positive connections through play. Daniel has presented at conferences worldwide, sharing his insights on the power of play in fostering meaningful relationships.

Building Connections Through Positive Play with Daniel Inman

COURSE

Why This Course Will Benefit You:

Participating in this course offers several advantages:

- Enhanced Relationships: Utilise play to strengthen bonds with children, promoting trust and open communication.
- Improved Social Skills: Equip children with the ability to interact positively with peers and adults through guided play activities.
- Stress Reduction: Implement playful interactions to alleviate anxiety and create a joyful learning environment.
- Versatile Techniques: Gain adaptable strategies suitable for various settings, including home, school, and community environments.

By engaging in this course, you'll acquire valuable tools to connect with children effectively, fostering their emotional growth and enhancing your relationship with them.

