GET TO KNOW
BIOLOGICAL SCIENCES

Introduction

Bioscience is a knowledge-based science which requires well-trained scientists with high-level laboratory and analytical skills, originality, creativity, problem solving skills, literacy, numeracy and synthesis skills.

Biological Science and Biology degrees are initially very wide in content, and are about the origins of life, how living organisms function and how they interact with the environment. They offer modules allowing you to study what interests you most and in many cases the degree structures can lead to a specialised degree, based on the knowledge you gain in the first year.

Course Organisation

Courses are available as either 3 (4 years in Scotland) full time BSc degrees, or 4 (5 years in Scotland) undergraduate Masters MSci degree. The undergraduate Masters degree's fourth year is devoted to developing and honing research skills chiefly through an extended research project focusing on research done within the research groups in the School/ faculty.

Course Content

Most courses usually share the same first year as Biology.

The first 2 years are broad based, with opportunities to specialise in the later part of the course.

There are about 153 UK institutions offering Biology or Biology related subjects at degree level. Biological Sciences or Biosciences can cover the following complex studies: Animal Biotechnology (animal health and well being), Biochemistry, Biodiversity, Bioethics, Biomedical Engineering, Biophysics, Botany, Cell Biology, Ecology, Food Science, Forensic Science, Genetics, Immunology, Microbiology, Molecular Biology, Pharmacology, Physiology, Sports & Exercise Sciences, Virology, Zoology and many more specialisations.

How it works

Applications for undergraduate degrees for most of the UK universities go via UCAS. You will need to register and complete a UCAS form, with payment, by the set deadline. Colleges will usually set internal deadlines for their students. With the exception of Oxford and Cambridge, the UCAS deadline for competitive universities is January 13, 2027.

The final deadline to submit a UCAS application is June 30.
