PROJECT OVERVIEW

The Village of Orland Park is undertaking one coordinated Arts and Entertainment Planning Study that brings together two complementary efforts: a feasibility study for a potential performing arts center and a strategic operating plan for Centennial Park West. These efforts will examine community needs, market demand, facilities, programming, operations, finances and implementation priorities to help the Village make informed, strategic decisions about the future of arts and entertainment.

SCHEDULE

The study launched in August 2026 and final plans are anticipated by February 2027.

STUDY TEAM

Keen Independent Research and Theatre Projects are collaborating on this effort, combining expertise in venue planning, arts and cultural market analysis, community engagement, strategic planning, operations and financial feasibility.

HOW TO GET INVOLVED

Community and stakeholder input will help shape recommendations for both the performing arts feasibility work and the future of Centennial Park West. In-person and virtual opportunities to participate will be posted on the study website, which can be accessed by scanning the QR code above.

The study team can also be contacted at any time via phone or email.

STUDY GOALS

The Orland Park Arts and Entertainment Planning Study will:

- Assess community needs, market demand and existing arts and entertainment assets;
- Evaluate options for a new performing arts facility and the future of Centennial Park West;
- Identify sustainable programming, operating and revenue strategies;
- Gather input from residents, stakeholders and community partners; and
- Provide clear, practical recommendations to guide future investment and decision-making.
