

Ridley Hall Learning Life

At Ridley Hall, our life as a community of learning is grounded in three central commitments: the pursuit of wisdom, the study of theology, and the continuous commitment to join in God’s mission. At the heart of this learning cycle is a life of service to God and community.

THE PURSUIT OF WISDOM

We practice spiritual disciplines of prayer, study and learning to live well in community because it helps us put down roots of faithfulness and connection, which then prepares to engage with a changing world in ways that are both creative and faithful.

THE STUDY OF THEOLOGY

We do theology as Christians all the time. But to study theology is to go deeper and ask, is this thing I believe really the right thing? What are the consequences of believing this? Studying theology means that when we do theology ‘on the hoof’, in the everyday, our theology is thoughtful, rooted and faithful.

JOINING IN GOD’S MISSION

God is at work in the world. All of us at Ridley believe this, and we believe that God is calling us to join in. Joining means participating in God’s mission, by proclaiming the Gospel, by being involved in our world, by caring for others, serving our communities and working towards justice and peace.
