N.B. The insurance providers listed in this guide are those with which other Tomorrow.bio members have obtained policies with. Of course, we encourage you to explore additional insurance providers to find a policy that works best for you.

This guide will be updated periodically as we learn of new providers or policy options. If you have successfully arranged life insurance for cryopreservation through a provider not listed here—or would like help reviewing whether a policy would be suitable—please contact us at support@tomorrow.bio

Relevant Information

How to Set-Up Tomorrow.bio as Beneficiary:

- Decide on your funding amount and also term-length. Current cryopreservation prices are €75.000 for brain-only, or €200.000 for whole-body.
- Research and compare reputable insurers, and proceed to complete an application online, or with an agent.
- During the application, specify that you would like to list a GmbH (German company with limited liability) as a beneficiary, and use the information found in our Imprint, here.
- Once approved, review the policy and if you're satisfied, proceed to activate it.
- Please scan policy documents (Insurer, Policy Number, Insurance Amount, Expiry Date) and send to support@tomorrow.bio

Can I Over-Insure to Make Sure My Coverage Keeps Up with Inflation or Rising Costs?

Yes, this is certainly an option you can take. Here, you have the option of creating an addendum that specifies where you would like any excess money to go, for example charity, family/friends etc.

If this is something that you would like to proceed with, please contact support@tomorrow.bio so that we can list the information needed to prepare the addendum.
