

Our Purpose

Caribbean Poultry Association

The Caribbean Poultry Association (CPA) is recognised as the leading livestock organisation in the Caribbean and ranks among the top regional agribusiness groups.

Its membership includes small, medium, and fully integrated producers of grains, poultry meat, eggs, and value-added products, along with suppliers of finished feeds for poultry, swine, cattle, sheep, goats, horses and fish. National poultry and egg associations, as well as service providers, are also members of the CPA.

The CPA is highly regarded both regionally and internationally. We collaborate with policy makers, organize technical symposia and webinars, provide current information on poultry industry developments worldwide, encourage our members to innovate and adopt relevant technologies and maintain public engagement through various social media platforms.

Our core purpose is to mobilise game-changing collaboration within the Caribbean poultry industry players with credible data, resources and partners.

To deliver this core purpose, the CPA provides key areas of support in:

1. Offering expert advice and transformational business support for poultry industry players.
2. Advocacy as the regional spokesman and representative for the poultry and livestock feeds industries.
3. Apprising its members and policy makers on global and regional developments that impact on the industry.
4. Networking within and outside the sector.
5. Training and building expertise and knowledge.
6. Disseminating scientific and technological knowledge.

Members recognise that that regional food self-sufficiency serves as a foundational principle for confidence, opportunity, sustainability, resilience, and prosperity within all sectors of society.
