

The chapter concludes with a moving account of a “pavement moment.” Perhaps you’ve experienced such a moment or know someone who has. If not, you might imagine one. In such a moment, what might be your anchor or compass? In your journals, try to visualize and draw your “anchor,” your “compass.” Who or what in your life might keep you grounded or rightly oriented during such moments?