

Cody Egan

Housing Stability
Community Justice
Advocate

Cody Egan is the Housing Services Supervisor at Ogden-Weber Community Action Partnership. He developed the Tenant Landlord Mediation Program and Renter Education Program. Cody is passionate about finding innovative programs and strategies to leverage to provide additional support to the residents of Weber County who face housing instability.

What Justice Work Means to Cody

"This certification allows me to do my job and offer services the client is actually looking for. It has been super helpful because there is a vacuum of knowledge.

"It also brought personal enrichment to know more about housing and the court system, including civil procedure, and how that may apply in other areas of the law and in understanding how courts operate."

The Justice Work Effect

"When tenants are not fully educated about the eviction or court process, they get blindsided by the process.

"Being able to explain that to them is nice; even though it can be bad news, they feel good knowing what's happening. Not knowing is worse. Even when it may be depressing news, from my perspective, they always leave feeling better that they at least know what is going on. They have me as a resource to help make decisions and prepare themselves."

Learn more about the Ogden-Weber Community Action Partnership at www.owcap.org. and read their legal services case study at www.cjau.org/impact.