Biography

Anna also currently serves as chairperson of the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority’s Board of Directors, which is the group of industry professionals that provides oversight and strategic direction to the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority.

Prior to joining Calderwood in 2021, Anna served as an independent financial services regulatory and legal consultant from 2018 to 2021. Among other engagements, she advised the Cayman Islands Ministry of Financial Services on the development of several pieces of financial services legislation, including legislation relating to compliance with the global standards on economic substance and the enhancements to the domestic regulatory regime for investment funds.

From 2008 to 2017, Anna was an attorney at Maples, an international law firm in the Cayman Islands and, prior to that, Ogier in the Cayman Islands. At both firms, she focused on matters concerning fund structuring, establishment, ongoing legal and regulatory compliance, fund governance and the establishment and operation of investment management entities in the Cayman Islands.

Anna is an honors graduate in law from the University of Liverpool, England and completed her Professional Practitioner’s Course (Cayman Islands) with Queen’s University Belfast. Anna qualified as an attorney in the Cayman Islands in 2005. Prior to that she received a Bachelor of Science in Economics from Loyola University.
