The path that led you here is unclear, and we're left wondering what brought you to this blog post. Let's assume that fate played a role, bringing us together at this precise moment. As I share my reading, I'm drawing from the Witches Wisdom Oracle Cards by Barbara Meiklejohn-Free and Flavia Kate Peters. This Mabon (Balance) reading is about watching for the unseen patterns in our lives, just like how Winter brings rest and recovery before Spring's renewal. We often overlook that humans are part of nature's cycles, going through phases like animals do. As we enter Autumn, it's time to harvest what we've sown, reflecting on what's ready to manifest. This card invites us to question: "What am I not seeing?" in a situation we struggle with. We must examine our choices, conscious or unconscious, that have led us to this point. Now is the time to assess and decide how to proceed. Will you choose to restore balance by making specific decisions or seeking guidance from your Higher Self? You're stuck in a situation that's not what you want, but it's your choice to change it. Recognize that you made decisions that led you here, and now it's time for new choices. You can't be forced into staying where you are - just make the decision to leave and take one step towards something better. Don't settle for 'almost as good' because it'll keep you in a cycle of unhappiness. It's your desire you want, not some compromise that's less fulfilling. You're drawn to the Watchtower of the North (Winter), which is about being at hand to choose balance and creating situations that align with your true desires. This card tells us to watch out for our tendency to settle for less and instead focus on manifesting our true aspirations in a way that feels authentic and fulfilling. Your challenge now is to allow yourself space for magic to occur, rather than controlling every aspect of your life. It's scary to let go, but remember Elsa from Frozen and her famous song - it's time to "let it go" and surrender to the Universe. As you look at your situation, consider what emotions might be clouding your judgment. Are you overthinking and ignoring parts of yourself that need attention? Take a moment to tune into your feelings and get back in touch with what truly resonates with you. Autumn's presence in your reading indicates that it's time to acknowledge and confront your true emotions. This might require some self-reflection to uncover what's truly within you. Rather than suppressing these feelings, consider allowing yourself to freely express them - yes, even if it means having an ugly cry or two! With Autumn connected to the element of water, it's essential to be open to exploring the depths of your emotions. When you're ready to confront your true desires, you'll find that happiness is often at the core. However, achieving this might require making day-to-day choices that align with your values and priorities.
