A fascinating new study tour, offering an in-depth exploration of palliative care in the small, treasure-filled island of Sri Lanka. Led by David Prail, the Managing Editor of ehospice.com and an experienced tour leader, this itinerary brings together professional engagement, cultural context, and experiential travel.

Thanks to evolving government policies, collaboration with healthcare professionals in India and charitable initiatives, the landscape of palliative care in Sri Lanka has improved significantly over the past decade. Access to essential medications has expanded, and the establishment of the College of Palliative Medicine of Sri Lanka in 2021 reflects a growing commitment to strengthening palliative care services across the country.

However, palliative care in Sri Lanka remains in its nascent stages. With increased efforts needed to scale these developments to meet current and growing need, this is an exciting time to see its progress first-hand.

Through site visits to major facilities, including the National Cancer Institute and Suwa Arana Hospice, as well as expert discussions with specialist cohorts, key individuals and communities, the tour offers a holistic view of palliative care. It explores health policy, service provision, access to medication, research, education, and the empowerment of individuals and communities.

The full and varied cultural programme features iconic attractions, local visits and experiences. Enjoy mouthwatering cuisine and stay in some lovely hotels with ample free time to relax, join optional activities, or explore independently.

THIS TOUR IS CLASSED AS:

Level 3 | Moderate

Regular walking at destinations, extended standing and /or increased travel distances. Good fitness is required.

Tour Leader

In 2015 David retired from a long career in hospice care - though he continues to be actively engaged as Managing Editor of ehospice.com. A graduate of York and Durham universities, David moved from being a mathematics student to Episcopal Parish Priest to Course Director of St George's College, Jerusalem. He founded the travel company "Wind, Sand & Stars" and was the founding director of the McCabe Educational Trust, before joining St. Luke's Hospice (Harrow & Brent) in 1991.

David became the chief executive of Help the Hospices (now Hospice UK) in 1996, where he led the organization through a period of significant growth and change – firmly positioning it as the leadership organisation for UK hospices and the national voice for hospice care. David led the development of the Worldwide Hospice Palliative Care Alliance where he was founding co-chair. At various times he has been on the advisory panel of the Hospice Palliative Care Association of South Africa, an international observer on the board of the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization in the USA and on the board of The Indian Association of Palliative Care.

David is also the founder of ehospice, through which he continues to engage with hospice and palliative care organisations around the world.

“David had an enormous amount of particular knowledge in this field, wisdom with it and a sweet sense of fun that we all enjoyed.”
