

Are you eager to explore the world of tomorrow and help tackle strategic challenges in health and society? Are you looking for an internship that blends the explorative world of futures studies and foresight with strategic advisory practices, while working alongside global thought leaders in health? An internship with the Copenhagen Institute for Futures Studies (CIFS) offers you a unique opportunity to do just that.

The Copenhagen Institute for Futures Studies is seeking a full-time Health Junior Associate (Advisory Intern) from January 19th, 2026, for 6 months. The deadline for applications is October 31st, 2025.

Please note: This internship is ON-SITE (Copenhagen, Denmark). Current students are preferred. It is possible to earn ECTS credits as part of the internship.

About CIFS

CIFS is an independent, non-profit futures think tank. Our health team is multidisciplinary, working across public and personalised health to apply accessible data to policy and practice, empower citizens, and build ecosystems of collaboration. We aim to improve healthcare by leveraging our foresight capabilities to equip and inspire individuals, organisations, and decision-makers to act on the future today.

In addition to driving the transition toward more sustainable healthcare systems, we publish foresight-driven reports and magazines with leading health partners, host talks, workshops and courses and create joint initiatives that bring together diverse stakeholders to shape future-ready solutions.

Main Assignments

Your main assignments will be to:

- Conduct research and analyses in the field of health
 - Produce insights, results, and recommendations for clients
 - Develop presentation material for workshops and presentations
 - Assist in the facilitation of workshops including administrative tasks
 - Support the health team with a wide variety of ad-hoc tasks
-

What We Offer

As our new Health Junior Associate, you will work closely with our health team as part of a diverse, international, and multidisciplinary group, engaged in an exciting and varied project portfolio. You will have the opportunity to apply your skills across national, regional, and global projects involving public, private, and civil society stakeholders.

You will also have the chance to publish your own articles on future-related topics through our FARSIGHT platform. This internship is a unique opportunity to explore the future of health with us and our partners, while gaining insight into our methodologies and advisory practice.

What You Offer

We expect you to be a recently graduated bachelor's or a current master's-level student with a relevant academic background. We value diverse backgrounds and personalities. In addition, you bring:

- A high level of personal drive and ambition
- A creative, analytical, and versatile mindset
- The ability to navigate complex issues and a desire to exceed client expectations
- A positive attitude and good sense of humour to fit into our workplace culture
- Fluency in English, spoken and written (Danish and/or other languages are a plus)
- A health-related degree (life sciences, public/global health, health policy, psychology, etc.) is an advantage, but most important is a strong interest in health-related topics and futures thinking
- Student status (preferred, due to ECTS eligibility)

HOW TO APPLY

To apply, please send your resume and a cover letter explaining why you are the right candidate for the position and other relevant documents to internship@cifs.dk with "Health Advisory Internship" in the subject line.