WHO WE ARE and WHAT WE DO

ABOUT the ORG

Established in 1991, The Philadelphia Cultural Fund is a non-profit 501(c)(3) organization dedicated to enriching Philadelphia's artistic and cultural landscape.

By providing general operating support to Philadelphia-based arts and culture organizations, we advocate for the value of the arts and their importance to the growth and future of our community.

The social, educational, and economic development of Philadelphia is tied to the vitality of arts and culture in our city. PCF recognizes and promotes the contributions and services of Philadelphia-based organizations, both emerging and established, across all ten districts.

Each year, PCF awards operating grants to local organizations engaged in the creation, education, preservation, exhibition, and presentation of diverse artistic and cultural disciplines. These grants, made possible through an allocation from the City of Philadelphia's annual budget, strengthen the city's cultural ecosystem and ensure that the arts continue to thrive.

LOOKING AHEAD

This year marked an important turning point for our organization as we began the process of developing a three-year strategic plan that will guide our work from FY27 through FY29. In partnership with AFE Strategies, and with the thoughtful involvement of our Board of Directors and staff, we engaged in a series of intentional conversations and working sessions designed to reflect on our history, assess our current impact, and envision our future role in supporting Philadelphia's vibrant arts and culture community. Over the course of the year, this included two board retreats and two staff retreats, which provided critical opportunities for reflection, collective learning, and strategic alignment. These gatherings have allowed us to consider both the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead and to ensure that multiple voices inform the plan's development.

Through this collaborative process, we are discovering new guiding pathways that affirm and expand our commitment to accessibility, equity, and the long-term sustainability of Philadelphia's arts ecosystem. This planning effort represents a significant milestone for our 34-year-old organization and signals our continued investment in strengthening the cultural fabric of our city.

The Strategic Plan will be introduced in two phases: Phase 1 in October 2025 and Phase 2 in September 2026. Importantly, the 2027 grant cycle will be the first to reflect major changes shaped by the strategic planning process, ushering in a new chapter of our grantmaking practice.

We are deeply grateful to our consultants for their expertise and partnership, and we are energized to continue this important work in the year ahead. As the plan takes shape, we look forward to sharing more with our partners, grantees, and the broader community, confident that the process will result in a stronger, more responsive PCF for years to come. Rooted in resilience, fueled by growth, and centered on community impact, this next chapter of our work reflects both the strength of Philadelphia's cultural community and our shared commitment to its future.

A MESSAGE from GABRIELA SANCHEZ

PCF
Executive Director

A TOAST, ~~even~~ ESPECIALLY in Hard Times

Tending to home has been my heart's work since becoming Executive Director two years ago. Like any good garden, we are beginning to see the first flowers bloom while countless seeds quietly take root beneath the surface, waiting for their season.

The work of tending, nurturing, and creating fertile ground for growth is a labor of love, one that I believe is as important internally as it is externally.

- We ignite play at staff meetings to stay connected.
- We share leadership and facilitation within our work, ensuring that all voices are heard and valued.
- We celebrate our wins—whether personal or professional—as a collective victory because when we care for our internal ecosystem, we are better equipped to care for the external one.

I believe that even in the often rigid structures of philanthropy, imagination must lead. Imagination allows us to dream bigger; it is how we build systems that are not only more effective but also more human and more just. As an artist, I learned that creativity and curiosity are not optional in life or work. They are the pulse.

They are how we survive and more importantly, how we thrive.

In times of uncertainty, this commitment to nurturing PCF's internal culture has grounded us. It has given us the strength and clarity to navigate challenges while embracing new opportunities with open hearts and bold vision.

And now, we raise a toast.

The Philadelphia Cultural Fund (PCF) exists because of the incredible artists, cultural organizations, and communities who keep Philadelphia's creative spirit alive. This year reminded us that we are all interconnected. In this spirit of community, we reflect on an extraordinary year of growth, learning, and bold action.

At the start of FY25, PCF's Board made the important decision to pause accepting new grant applications and to forgo conducting a peer panel process. This was not a retreat; it was a strategic move to reassess and ensure a more equitable, sustainable, and impactful future for Philadelphia's arts ecosystem. We awarded grants to 262 small to mid-sized organizations who have been part of our grantee family between FY20–FY24, while launching a strategic planning journey.

This year also marked a period of significant growth for our team. We expanded from a small and mighty two-person staff to four full-time and one part-time team members, allowing us to amplify grantee stories, build a dynamic community calendar, and increase our visibility. We also welcomed new Board members, whose leadership will help shape PCF's future.

One of the most transformative moments this year was receiving a historic $8,000,000 investment from the William Penn Foundation (WPF), a four-year intermediary partnership that will allow PCF to expand our reach, deepen trust-based philanthropic practices, and provide vital general operating support to Philadelphia's vibrant and diverse cultural organizations. The Board and I offer our deepest gratitude to Lindsay Tucker So, Barbara Wong, Shawn McCaney and the WPF Board for believing in this vision.

Additionally, in collaboration with Philadelphia City Council, we launched a one time pilot: the 2025 City Council Community Culture Award. This award provided one-time grants to community-based organizations that preserve, celebrate, and amplify Philly's cultural traditions at the neighborhood level.

While federal arts funding faces significant threats, PCF stands rooted in equity, trust, and an abundance mindset, strengthened by the resiliency and brilliance of our Philadelphia art and culture community.

I am honored to work alongside an incredible team: Camille Halsey; Aubrey Donisch; Taylor Townes; Amy Smith; our Board of Directors; our dynamic consultants; and our partners who make this work deeply impactful. I am grateful for PCF's Board President—LaNeshe Miller-White—and the whole Executive Committee for their commitment, guidance and support.

Looking ahead, FY26 will be a “test” year, as we activate the pillars of our strategic plan, leading to its full realization in FY27.

A toast to our grantees, staff, Board of Directors, consultants, and community-at-large.

A toast to life. A toast to us all.

Gabriela Sanchez

ABOUT the GRANT PROGRAM

Yes! And... Collaborative Arts

A total of $3,496,000 was awarded to 262 Philadelphia-based arts and culture organizations.

These grants are supported through the City of Philadelphia's Fiscal Year 2025 Budget, which provided the Philadelphia Cultural Fund with an allocation of $4.2 million.

The 2025 Art & Culture Grants deliver essential general operating support to small and mid-sized organizations, each with an average annual budget of $1.5 million or less, at a time when the sector continues to navigate the lasting effects of disruption and financial strain.

Notably, 54% of grantees provide youth programming, reflecting the critical role these organizations play in engaging and inspiring Philadelphia's young people. The average grant awarded was $13,344.

A heartfelt congratulations to the 262 recipients of the 2025 Art & Culture Grant!

We are honored to celebrate these organizations, whose programs are guided by passion, creativity, and a deep commitment to their communities.

The Philadelphia Cultural Fund remains steadfast in advocating for our city's arts and culture sector, whose vital work continues to weave the threads of connection, expression, and resilience that shape the vibrant tapestry of Philadelphia.
