Former IRS Special Agent Joseph R. Banister blew the whistle on the IRS's deceitful and fraudulent enforcement of the federal income tax in February, 1999. The criminal and civil arms of the IRS attempted to silence and discredit him with various heavy-handed tactics, including a bogus 2004 criminal indictment and 2005 criminal prosecution (from which he was deservedly acquitted).

Banister comes from a family of government servants:

Banister's duty-bound whistleblowing was ignored by IRS officials:

Banister and his colleagues have investigated and proven that the IRS is fraudulently misapplying the federal income tax laws and regulations outside the boundaries of those laws and regulations. A portion of the proof comes from the IRS's own notices issued to Banister and other Americans:

The American people deserve to know if the IRS is fraudulently assessing the federal income tax through input of fraudulent computer entries used to create bogus, fraudulent enforced collection.
