

Independent Artists Can Now Explore Advances on Future Streaming Revenue Directly Through LANDR

2026-11-16

LANDR and beatBread launch LANDR Artist Funding, giving eligible musicians access to flexible funding options based on their catalog's performance.

MONTREAL AND LOS ANGELES, November 16, 2026 – LANDR, the AI-powered music platform used by more than 8 million musicians worldwide, and beatBread, a leading music funding platform, today announced the launch of LANDR Artist Funding, a new service that gives independent artists a way to turn their catalog's streaming performance into upfront capital for their next career opportunity.

Eligible LANDR Distribution artists can now see an estimated advance range directly within their LANDR account, based on their music's historical performance and projected future streaming revenues as determined by beatBread’s underwriting engine. Artists interested in moving forward can initiate the process through LANDR, with beatBread responsible for evaluating applications, confirming funding options and contracting directly with artists.

For independent musicians, timing can make all the difference. A release gaining traction may need additional promotion, a tour may require upfront expenses, or a new project may depend on securing studio time, equipment or collaborators before existing streaming revenues arrive. Artist Funding helps musicians explore ways to invest in those opportunities when they matter most.

> Independent artists run real businesses, but capital rarely shows up when the opportunity does," said Pascal Pilon, Founder and CEO of LANDR. "By partnering with beatBread, we're helping artists put the value of music they've already released to work, on a timeline that matches their career instead of their payment cycle.
>
> Pascal Pilon, Co-Founder and CEO, LANDR

Flexible Funding Designed Around Artists' Needs

By offering different funding structures, the service is designed to give artists greater flexibility to select an arrangement that aligns with their individual goals and career plans.
The new service combines LANDR's distribution ecosystem with beatBread's data-driven music funding expertise, making it easier for eligible artists to explore financing opportunities from an account they already use.

- See an estimate: Eligible artists view an indicative advance range within their LANDR Distribution account, based on their catalog's performance. This estimate is not a guaranteed offer.
- Explore funding options: Interested artists express their interest through LANDR. Following preliminary checks, beatBread evaluates the application and determines the available funding options.
- Review and decide: Artists receive a confirmed offer from beatBread, including applicable fees, recoupment terms and contractual commitments, before deciding whether to accept.

- Receive funding: If an offer is accepted, beatBread contracts directly with the artist and provides the advance. Royalties from the recordings and revenue streams covered by the agreement are applied toward recoupment under its terms.

> Independent artists have different ambitions, and funding shouldn't be one-size-fits-all,” said Matthew Tilley, Co-Founder and Head of Artist & Industry Development at beatBread. “Our technology allows us to evaluate the earning potential of an artist's music and offer a range of funding structures that give them more choice. Through our partnership with LANDR, we're making those opportunities accessible within a platform artists already use, helping them find the option that best supports their next move.
>
> Matthew Tilley, Co-Founder and Head of Artist & Industry Development, beatBread

Distribution That Does More Than Deliver

LANDR Artist Funding reflects the company's broader strategy to expand music distribution beyond release delivery and royalty collection into a connected platform that helps independent artists build and sustain their careers.

The service complements LANDR's existing ecosystem of tools for music creation, mastering, distribution, promotion and monetization, adding access to capital as another resource for artists looking to grow.

Getting music onto streaming platforms is the starting line, not the finish," said Daniel Rowland, VP of Strategy & Partnerships at LANDR. "Distribution should help artists understand what their catalog is worth and give them ways to act on it. Artist Funding connects the music they've already made to what they want to do next.

Daniel Rowland, VP of Strategy & Partnerships, LANDR

LANDR Artist Funding is available to eligible LANDR Distribution artists across major international markets. Artists can explore potential advances and review available funding options directly through their LANDR accounts, subject to eligibility and beatBread's approval.

For more information, visit landr.com/royalty-advances

About LANDR
LANDR is an AI-powered music platform that helps artists create, distribute, and monetize their work. Its tools and services span distribution, promotion, monetization, mastering, samples, plugins, and collaboration, serving a global community of more than 8 million musicians building sustainable careers on their own terms. LANDR also owns both Reason Studios and Synchro Arts. Learn more at landr.com.

About beatBread
beatBread is a music funding platform helping artists, songwriters, independent labels and music businesses access flexible growth capital. Founded in 2020, the company has supported more than 2,000 clients across 48 countries, providing financing for existing music catalogs as well as new and unreleased music. Its proprietary chordCashAI technology supports data-driven underwriting, while its funding solutions are designed to give creators greater choice over financing structures and career decisions. Through its Funding Network and Comparison Tool, eligible clients can explore and compare financing options. Learn more at beatbread.com.

MEDIA CONTACT

LANDR
Karine Fortin
Head of External Communications, LANDR
kfortin@landr.com
+1-514-699-4952

beatBread
Dylan Jones
Boldsquare
dylan@boldsquare.com
+1-718-687-8994