

Unlocking Title IV-A Funds for Instructional Improvement & Student Readiness

Title IV, Part A — the Student Support and Academic Enrichment (SSAE) grant — is a flexible federal funding source under ESSA designed to help districts improve instructional quality, educator effectiveness, and student outcomes through well-rounded education and effective use of technology.

How can Title IV-A funds be used?

- Instructional improvement initiatives
- Professional development for educators
- Technology that improves teaching and learning
- College and career readiness programs
- Student planning and counseling supports
- Solutions that enhance instructional quality and student outcomes

How does Evaluation™ align with Title IV-A funding?

Evaluation is an instructional growth and educator development platform that supports districts in improving teaching and learning through data, feedback, and professional development. Here's how Evaluation aligns with Title IV-A priorities:

- Supports professional development tied to instructional improvement
- Strengthens educator effectiveness through consistent feedback and growth cycles
- Uses technology to improve instructional practice and outcomes
- Provides data and documentation to support district improvement goals
- Enhances instructional consistency across schools and classrooms

How does Pathways® align with Title IV-A funding?

Pathways is a comprehensive counseling and student planning platform that supports well-rounded education and college and career readiness. Here’s how it aligns with Title IV-A funding priorities:

- Supports college, career, and graduation readiness initiatives
- Helps counselors and educators monitor student progress toward graduation
- Improves access to academic planning and postsecondary pathway data
- Uses technology to personalize student planning and support informed decision-making
- Strengthens counseling capacity while improving student outcomes

How can districts use Title IV-A for Evaluation & Pathways?

Districts can use Title IV-A funds to:

- Invest in instructional improvement systems supported by professional development
- Strengthen educator effectiveness and consistency across schools
- Expand college and career readiness and counseling initiatives
- Use technology to support data-informed decisions about teaching and learning

Both Evaluation™ and Pathways® supplement existing requirements and support district-identified needs, helping districts meet Title IV-A’s “supplement, not supplant” requirement.

Education Advanced® brings instructional improvement and student readiness together through technology that supports educators, counselors, and district leaders.

By streamlining data, reporting, and implementation, districts gain actionable insight into teaching and learning while freeing time to focus on professional growth and student success.
