Submitting Launch Content

What is Launch Content?

Launch content refers to new initiatives, resources, research publications, tools, platforms, frameworks, programmes, networks, partnerships or campaigns that organisations and evidence stakeholders wish to formally introduce or showcase during Africa Evidence Week. These may be newly developed initiatives or existing initiatives being launched to a wider audience, provided they contribute to strengthening evidence-informed decision-making (EIDM) in Africa. The category creates a platform for organisations to share what they are developing, why it matters, who it serves and the opportunities it creates for the wider evidence community.

Launch Content for Africa Evidence Week 2026

Launch content creates more than a space for discussion, knowledge sharing and reflection; it becomes a platform for action, innovation and collaboration. It allows the showcase of work happening across the African evidence ecosystem, increase the visibility of locally driven initiatives, connect organisations with potential partners and collaborators, and encourage the uptake of new tools, knowledge and approaches. It brings evidence that moves Africa to life by showcasing the ideas, innovations and collaborations translating evidence into practical action and impact across the continent.

What your launch will need

- Host details: name, surname, role and organisation.
- A photo of each host.
- A free-to-use image to represent your launch content.
- Your core message: an indication of what it is.
- Social media handles for all hosts and organisations involved, where possible.
- Length: provide a link to images, articles.
- Language: French or English.

How to submit

Submit your blog post through our online submission process, and our programme officer will contact you to discuss how to proceed.

The AEN reserves the right not to publish a submitted launch concept that does not align with the parameters of the Week.
