Sharing Your Publications

What are publications?

Publications are published outputs, such as research reports, toolkits and guidelines, that are available to the public. Africa Evidence Week (AfEW) gives organisations a platform to introduce these outputs to the EIDM community.

Why share your publication?

The Africa Evidence Network (AEN) believes that publications make content readily available to the EIDM community and encourage public engagement. Engagement of this kind, through events like AfEW 2026, can enrich policymaking by bringing diverse views and voices to decisions made in Africa.

Participants in AfEW 2026 are invited to lead by sharing their publications as part of the Week. This involves participating institutions:

- Sharing the title and authors of the publication
- Making the publication freely available online
- Promoting the publication through their own channels during the Week

The AEN will support these efforts by promoting each publication as part of AfEW 2026 activities. To do this, the AEN programme officer needs the information below.

How to submit

Complete the online submission form. Submit one form per publication. If you are sharing more than one publication, submit the form once for each.
