Jules Cho focuses her practice on healthcare law, regulatory compliance, and life sciences matters. She currently serves as a law clerk at Hassard Bonnington.

Jules has experience across both regulatory and transactional healthcare work. She previously worked with Davis Wright Tremaine’s healthcare practice, where she researched medical staff governance, nonprofit tax compliance, and federal and state healthcare programs. She also advised a healthcare startup on intellectual property strategy and commercialization through the Startup Legal Garage.

Prior to her legal career, Jules worked in healthcare project management, supporting the development and distribution of medical devices and navigating regulatory frameworks such as HIPAA compliance, patient data access, and device safety requirements.

In August 2026, Jules will join the Harvard Program on Regulation, Therapeutics, and Law (PORTAL) as a postdoctoral fellow through a joint fellowship with Boston University School of Law and CARB-X, where she will further develop expertise in pharmaceutical law and regulation while continuing her work with Hassard Bonnington.
