CLASSICAL CORNER

Why Latin Series-Language Precision

Every teacher knows how difficult translation is and knows that it is serious work--often slow work--but also what it means to the pupil who submits to it. The teacher knows that such a pupil is gaining a mastery over the resources of his mother tongue.

He is learning what words mean; the pupil is learning to differentiate related concepts, acquiring sense for form and style, and if he be so fortunate as to be endowed with any native gifts of thought having reached maturity, he has that indispensable equipment of the educated person--the capacity to say what he says with directness, clearness, precision, and effect.
