Fellowship: Little Vikings
(Comedy TV-Series Pilot episode)

Little Vikings is more than just a comedy. It's a deeply personal story- one that has lived in me through some of the hardest moments of my life. For years, I struggled with an undiagnosed health condition.

As a young woman in my twenties, I was unable to walk. In those dark times, when my world shrank to the size of a bed and days felt endless, the only thing that gave me relief was comedy. Especially stories where I could connect with the characters, where it felt like we were in it together.

That kind of laughter- raw, unfiltered, and full of heart was the only thing that cut through the weight of my illness and gave me the strength to keep going. Even now, on my bad days, it's what keeps me moving forward.

Since then, I've spoken to many people- those who have faced illness, loss, or trauma- who have had the same experience.

Comedy has a rare and incredible power to bring people together, to make them feel seen, and to heal through laughter.

That is why I am making Little Vikings. But it's about more than just laughter, it's about representation. The show follows homeless characters in leading roles, not as side plots, but as the heart of the story.
