Prompt #2: “You’re only going to be as wise as the relationships that you have.” – Lecrae

Title: As Wise as Relationships (Dance Video)

They say blood is thicker than water but what if it was compared to those who you have bled, sweat and cried for and with.

For the past 16 years I have been a part of something great, something real what it is might just be a little bit more complex than just a name. For now let’s call it floor obsession, a simple connection that we were all obsessed with the floor. Dancers fuelled by their craft enjoying their youth with late nights and impromptu explorations of the world.

Every day brought something new and sometimes emotions ran high between us. We always rolled with the punches used to bond and strengthen us to make each of us better. We called each other’s bullshit which made us better as people. We were each other’s mentors and despite age we always learned something from each other.

We spent thousands of hours together and trained wherever we could in schools, community centres, churches, parks, universities, dance studios, peoples homes, nightclubs in anywhere you could think of - and we’ve been kicked out of all of them at least once.

We would travel near and far to find a liveliest and most skilful to test ourselves usually coming out bruised and battered. We would beat ourselves up for a full week of training just to do it all over again. We tasted our fair share of defeats, sadness and anger, a lot of them leaving us with the feeling of wanting to quit but we were there for each other to pick each other up when we needed the most. It just made victory taste that much better.
