- Sample handling from launch to final product including: lab dips, strike-offs, prototypes, SMS, PPS, and shipment samples.
- Maintain accurate PLM data.
- Support product and packaging quality processes in line with Supplier Guidelines and the Björn Borg product promise.
- Handle communication and follow-ups with international vendors.
- Contribute to process efficiency and sustainability targets

Qualifications

- Bachelor's degree in Textile Economics, Product Development, or equivalent.
- Highly organized, efficient, and detail-oriented.
- Strong digital skills and confidence in administrative workflows.
- Excellent command of English.

Join us and support a high-performance team committed to quality, precision, and continuous improvement.

Who We Are Looking For

We're looking for someone who is communicative and clear, both verbally and in writing. You take initiative and drive tasks forward independently, while maintaining a keen eye for detail. You are structured and organized, even when juggling multiple projects at once. With a solution-oriented mindset and a creative approach to challenges, you adapt easily when priorities shift or circumstances change.

Björn Borg as a workplace

We are on an exciting journey and our ambitions are clear – Become the number 1 Sports Fashion brand in the world. We constantly challenge each other to push ourselves a little further, whether it is at work, in the gym or life in general. Björn Borg aims to offer a company culture built on high ambition, drive and a strong passion with a team spirit that will give you the power to succeed, and we value a positive mindset that can provide us with the strength to be the best at what we do.

Position: This is a full-time position located at our Headquarters (HQ) in Solna, Stockholm.
