Phone codes for Cyprus include +357, with different numbers for Nicosia (22), Famagusta (23), Larnaca (24), Limassol (25), Paphos (26), and mobile phones provided by CYTA (Mobile Phones - CYTA: 6, Mobile Phones - SoEasy: 8). Telephone numbers in Cyprus follow a closed numbering plan, adopted on December 1, 2001, requiring the addition of digits for both landline and mobile phone numbers. This change aimed to standardize the system, making it easier to dial numbers within or outside the country. The new system also allows for numbering portability between different networks. All phone numbers in Cyprus now have eight digits, instead of the previous six-digit numbers. The new numbering plan's logo features an octopus named TESA (short for Τελικό Εθνικό Αριθμοδότηση), which means Final National Numbering Plan in Greek. Previously, landline numbers consisted of a trunk code, area code, and six-digit number. For example, calling from Nicosia to another part of Cyprus required dialing 02 before the six-digit number. From abroad, it was +357 2 followed by the six digits. Mobile phone numbers started with 09, then six digits, which had to be dialled in full. When calling from within Cyprus, mobile numbers began with 99 and were dialled without the prefix. For international calls, the +357 9 prefix was used. The five districts of Cyprus (Nicosia, Famagusta, Larnaca, Limassol, and Pafos) each have their own two-digit dialling code for landline numbers. After the district code, a three-digit area code is written, which varies depending on the town. In Northern Cyprus, the Turkish numbering plan is used, with the 0392 code assigned for landline numbers and 0533 or 0542 codes used for mobile phones. Calls from the Republic of Cyprus to Northern Cyprus use the code 0139 followed by a seven-digit subscriber number, charged at local rates. For calls in the opposite direction, area code 0123 is used but charged as an international call.
