

I'm not a bot

Peluchin entertainment cat video

In December 2018, YouTube channel Peluchin Entertainment faced widespread criticism and outrage after uploading videos that appeared to show the abuse and torture of cats and kittens. The videos gained significant attention online, with over 417,000 views and 13,500 comments within three weeks. Following this controversy, other YouTubers such as TheQuartering and Cecil Mcfly created content condemning Peluchin Entertainment's actions. In response to the backlash, Chilean officials allegedly launched an investigation into Oyarzo, a location mentioned in one of the videos. However, it is unclear if any concrete action was taken against Peluchin Entertainment. As a result of the controversy, Peluchin Entertainment has been banned from YouTube by several users and has received widespread criticism online. The incident highlights the need for greater accountability and moderation on social media platforms when it comes to content that promotes animal abuse or harm. A large collection of audio files with subtitles (SRT) has been downloaded and shared online. The files are mostly in Spanish, but some also include English, Italian, and other languages. The topics range from video game-related content to music videos and comedy sketches. Some of the files appear to be related to a popular YouTube channel or community, while others seem to be standalone creations. Some examples of the types of content included in this collection are: * Video game-themed songs and rap battles * Comedy skits and parodies * Music videos and covers * Gaming streams and Let's Play sessions * Personal vlogs and challenges The files range in size from around 1KB to over 1000KB, with the majority falling between 10-1000KB. The file names often include phrases like "Peluchin," "Waluishi," and "SlendyTubbies," which may be related to specific YouTube channels or communities. Overall, this collection appears to be a large archive of fan-made content and creative works that have been shared online.