Lilly pulitzer size guide

Given article text here We are mere days away from the Lilly Pulitzer After Party Sale, resulting in numerous inquiries regarding sizing; therefore, I created this Lilly Pulitzer Sizing Guide to assist those new to shopping at Lilly or unfamiliar with these particular styles. For further guidance, please refer to part 2 of this sizing guide, which features newly added items to my closet as well as reader-recommended suggestions. My measurements: Size 4, 5'2", 34A Chest, 26 Waist Skipper Popover Print: Cheek to Cheek I recently acquired a Skipper Popover from Lilly, and I am pleased with it. The fabric's moderate weight allows for layering underneath while also enabling solo wear. I'm wearing a size small, which seems generous given the sleeves' proportions; however, I opted to size up cautiously in anticipation of shrinkage during washing. Madia Tunic Dress Print: Scuba Doo Initially, I was uncertain about this dress, but upon trying it on, I experienced a change of heart. The thin and unlined design makes it suitable for scorching summer days or beach trips when you need something lightweight and breathable. The dress's length is slightly longer than some other Lilly options, which I find appealing. I'm wearing a size small, and the garment runs true to size. Elsa Tops Print I have an affinity for Elsa tops from Lilly due to their ease of wear and versatility. If you're new to Lilly, I recommend starting with one of these tops. They are 100% silk, dry clean only, but lightweight and available in a wide variety of prints during the sale. I particularly enjoy the bubble sleeves and gold button detail. Sizing runs true to size; I'm wearing a size small. Marli Stretch Shift Dress Print: In The Beginning This Marli Stretch Shift dress has a slightly shorter hem than its regular counterpart, but it still adheres to Lilly's sizing standards. I'm wearing a size 4, and the stretch fabric provides some flexibility. The In The Beginning print is a unique representation of Lilly's origins as an illustration-printed juice stand. Luxletic Leggings Print: Coastal Blue Lion This is my first experience with Luxletic leggings from Lilly, and I am pleased with them. They are high-waisted and run true to size (I'm wearing a small). Although they're supposed to be capri-length, they fall above the ankles on me. The following pieces have yet to be confirmed for the After Party Sale, but I suspect they will be included. It's great that this item can be easily hemmed, making it convenient to wear. If you find the length too long, consider wearing wedges instead. I've been true to size with both the top and skirt, but I'm wearing a 4 in each, which sits just above the hips. The top is unlined, but nude undergarments make it seamless. For really hot days, this combo is perfect, but not suitable for work. I recently purchased the Dasha Sweater, which initially came in three to four colorways, so I'm hoping to see some of them resurface during the sale. The Martine and Elba sweaters have an oversized fit, so sizing down would be ideal. Both are expected to appear in different colors for the sale. Regarding washing, I cold-wash these on delicate settings and lay them flat to dry. The Elba Sweater has slightly shorter sleeves than the Martine, but both are versatile options. I'm less confident about the prints, as they're quite odd. However, sharing my fit experience will help if you come across similar pieces in this style. I've been eyeing this style for several years, but it always seems to pop up during the sale. I'm wearing an XS and it runs slightly smaller than true size 0. If you're unsure, I'd recommend sizing up one size to be safe or getting your normal size if you're certain. The Fontaine Dress is a favorite of mine, and while this color might not last long, its quality and fit are top-notch. It's not the most obvious Lilly Pulitzer style, but it's definitely worth keeping an eye out for. If it does come in white, I think my friends will be thrilled to get their hands on it for showers and rehearsal dinners. The sale is a great opportunity to snag this dress at a discount. During the After Party Sale, keep in mind that sales are final, so err on the side of caution and size up if you're unsure. I'm usually a size 6 in BoOHoo, medium in Forever 21, small in Lilly dresses, and size 2 or 4 in bottoms. In Old Navy, I'm a size 2 or 4. Dresses: I'd say they're between a small and medium. In Lilly dresses, I'm typically a size 4 or small. Tops are tricky for me, as I usually fit between a small and medium. The Skipper Popover in Seeing Pink Elephants is a size M and runs true to size. It has a looser fit, which I prefer. The Blue Crush Bamboo top in Size S fits pretty true to size. It's made of 100% silk and has a loose fit with no low neckline. Dresses-wise, the Mila Shift in Heart Breakers is my favorite from Lilly. Despite reviews saying it runs small, sizing up worked for me. The Annabelle Shift in Shorely Blue Annabelle Stripe fits a bit small on me, but I'd say it's true to size since I'm typically a 4. The Delia Shift in Toucan Play should have been a size 4 instead of the 6 I got. It's too long and loose for my 5'4" frame. The Carmel Dress in Pink Lemonade is super loose-fitting, but it could be tighter if you're shorter like me. See-through material means pairing it with nude undergarments. The Tana Shift in Never Been Betta runs true to size and isn't too short. It's one of my favorite dresses from Lilly after the Mila Shift. The Delphine Stretch Silk Tunic in Lazy River is next... I've recently fallen in love with this Jackie Shift Dress, which reminds me of the Tye Top style. The dress fits perfectly in a size small and has a longer hem that suits me just fine. The sizing is quite accurate, so I'd say it runs true to size. I actually got this dress from Uptown Cheapskate, but I'm pretty sure someone else altered it because there are some stitches near the shoulder area. It fits a bit tight on my shoulders, but overall, it's a great fit. I wore this shift dress for my college graduation and loved its print and silky material. However, I wish I had gotten an x-small size because it was a tad too big and the hemline is slightly too long. Pairing heels with the dress makes it look fine, but flats make the length awkward. So, if you're considering this dress, I'd recommend sizing down. I've always been impressed by Lilly Pulitzer's Callahan shorts, which have a 5" inseam that was longer than expected for me. But surprisingly, I really like the modest length! My usual size is 4 in pants and shorts, but size 2 fits me perfectly in these Callahan shorts. You can check out how I styled them here and here! The Adie shorts fit a bit snug on me despite being in the same size as the Callahan shorts. The main difference between these and the Callahans is that they're an inch shorter, which I actually prefer. However, you can see how I styled them in this outfit post. I was pleasantly surprised by my love for skorts, and I scored this Lenore Skort a couple After Party Sales ago! It's one of my favorite purchases, and I adore the length on it. The only thing is that it fits a bit looser than my Callahan shorts, but sizing down to 1 would be too small for me. So, I'd say it fits pretty true to size. Lastly, I have these Kelly Pants in size 6, which I thrifted brand new and initially thought were too big. But after washing them, they fit perfectly! I'm wondering if it's best to size up on these pants because they did fit a bit snugger after being washed. A full outfit post on these Kelly Pants is available here. Yeah, I'm obsessed with this skort thing - it's essentially a skirt with shorts underneath, so you get the best of both worlds. I picked up the same size as my Callahan shorts and it fits perfectly! As for sizing, I got a size 2 in this one too (just like most Lilly bottoms) and while it does fit a bit snugger than the Lenor Skort, it's not so tight that I'd need to size up. Stay tuned for a full outfit post featuring this skort. Hope this helps you all figure out what size to get when shopping online - posts like these always help me out! What are you most excited about scoring during the After Party Sale? Let me know in the comments below. Have a fantastic week, folks!
