ELEGANT DINING BEGINS AND ENDS WITH ITALIAN WINES AND CHEESES

PLANNING A PARTY?

You may want to follow the smart new trend of using fine Italian wines and cheeses as conversation-making, palette-pleasing party fare! Give your friends a party, yes, but give them something to talk about, something to taste that's new and delicious as well.

To give them something new, try this great food fashion very much in vogue for Fall and Winter — warm and rosy fine Italian wines to offset the chill outside. Combine them with Italian cheeses, both delicate and rich, firm or "runny," they offer new and delightful taste sensations and have a heart-warming heartiness to suit the season.

Serve the wines at room temperature, the cheeses with your favorite crackers and breads and you've got a party on the way! A party that's less work for the hostess, more fun for the guests because it's "different" as well as delicious, fun to taste and fun to talk about.

PROVOLONE, trussed up in cords, is a display piece in itself as it often hangs tantalizingly in cheese shop windows. This delectably delicate cheese goes pleasantly along with any wine, but best with sturdy "Barolo," a red wine with amber lights, from the Piedmont region.

PARMESAN, known to many in its grated form, is also marvelous for snacks when cut with a knife into bite-size chunks. This cheese comes from the province of Reggio Emilia, formerly ruled by the Dukes of Parma . . . and thereby gets its name. Tasty Parmesan bits are marvelous with "Barbera" wine.

ROMANO is pungent, sharper and saltier than parmesan, designed for those who shun the bland, and have disdain for the delicate. Firm in texture, hearty-tasting, this cheese is complemented by the sturdy, dry "Chianti" wine.

GORGONZOLA, may be more familiar with its green markings, and sharp, spicy taste. Best companion for it is a fine "Barbaresco" or any of the sturdy red wines.

For those who prefer white wines we recommend:

A cheese that's not too rich, and therefore invites more tasting, is FONTINA, a mellow, semi-soft cheese that is particularly good with pumpernickel. An ideal wine companion would be "Soave," a friendly, light and golden wine.

If you like your cheese on the tender, melting side, easy to spread (especially on bread), try STRACCHINO. This is a "runny" cheese which is quite rich without being sharp. You might like to serve "Lugana" (a wine from the Lake Garda region) which is very dry, very vivacious.

Familiar to almost everyone is BEL PAESE, a rich, bland cheese particularly popular with those who don't like the sharp cheeses. Best when it is soft and therefore, ripe. To accent it's bland taste, try the full-bodied, rich "Orvieto" which is available either dry or semi-sweet.

The rind of TALEGGIO should be lightly scraped before eating. For, if you cut it off, too much of this noble cheese is lost. Here is a cheese with personality: delicate and yet forceful. It should be very ripe, and should always be served at room temperature. At its best it spreads happily. With it you might like either a white "Freccia Rossa", a quite sturdy wine, or "Vernaccia", a heavier white wine from Sardinia.

You don't have to follow our recommendations to the letter. Rather, it is a happy experience to try all of these cheeses with the various wines until you find the combination you prefer. Cheese should be served at room temperature, always taken out of the refrigerator at least a half hour before serving. The wines may be served chilled, with a twist of lemon peel. White wines, like rosè wines, are best served chilled. Red wines should be served at room temperature.

If you are feeling more ambitious, you can use any of the wines mentioned to accompany these Hot Cheese Appetizers:

HOT CHEESE APPETIZERS

- | | |
|-------------------|--------------------------------|
| 1 cup breadcrumbs | ½ cup grated parmesan |
| 3 eggs | ½ tablespoon parsley (chopped) |
| salt and pepper | ½ cup flour |
| 1 egg, beaten | 1 cup Italian olive oil |

Mix the breadcrumbs with the cheese, the eggs, parsley and add salt and pepper to taste. Mixture must not get too dry. If it does, add a spoonful of milk. Form bite-size balls, dip into flour, then the beaten egg and fry in hot oil. Serve very hot on toothpicks.

All cheeses are available through local supermarkets, from department stores with gourmet departments, or through grocers carrying Italian foods.

The Fine Art of Cooking with Italian Cheeses

Become acquainted with Italian cheeses and you'll never be without them. In recipes they are the magic ingredient that adds delicious depth to inimitably Italian dishes; as desserts, they finish a meal with a fine flourish; and you'll resort to them constantly for snacks before, after and in-between meals. Few other foods are all things to all homemakers in this versatile, satisfying manner.

The sky is the limit in cooking with Italian cheeses. They can be used with practically anything from pasta to poultry, from fish to fruit, to create wonderful combinations that invite compliments to the chef.

You can vary your daily menus by using the endless variety of Italian cheeses that come in all shapes and sizes, textures and taste, from the melting mozzarella to the bland ricotta. When you experiment with Italian cheeses you'll discover the difference in flavor between parmesan and pecorino, both grating cheeses, and why fontina makes a cheese pie that leaves a lasting memory of delight! If you've stayed away from attempting a soufflé, start with an easy one that tastes like a slice of heaven - ricotta soufflé.

RICOTTA SOUFFLÉ

- | | |
|---------------------|-----------------------|
| 1 lb. fresh ricotta | 1 cup grated parmesan |
| 6 eggs | salt and pepper |

Preheat oven to 350°

Be sure ricotta is quite dry, if watery squeeze out in towel or cheesecloth. In large bowl place ricotta and add six egg yolks, one at a time. Mix well and add salt and pepper to taste. Beat egg whites until very stiff, then add to ricotta mixture a little at a time. Pour egg and cheese mixture into a soufflé dish, sprinkle top with grated parmesan, and bake in preheated oven for 45 minutes, or until top is golden. (Serves 4 to 6.)

CHEESE PIE

- | | |
|------------------------|--------------------------------|
| ¼ pound Fontina cheese | 4 whole eggs |
| 1 cup milk | ½ cup Parmesan cheese (grated) |

6 inch pie dish lined with crust

Cut Fontina into thin slivers. Mix Fontina, eggs and milk well in a mixing bowl. Beat with rotary beater until slightly foamy. Add half of Parmesan. Pour mixture into pie crust. Shake slightly to avoid bubbles. Sprinkle top with rest of Parmesan. Bake in preheated oven (350°) for about half hour. Serve immediately. (Serves 4)
This can be served as the first course of an important dinner, or as a one course luncheon dish with salad.

TORTINO DI SPINACI
(Spinach pie)

- | | |
|-------------------------------|--|
| 1 lb. cooked, chopped spinach | 1 cup grated parmesan cheese |
| ½ cup fresh ricotta | 3 eggs |
| salt and pepper | ½ cup Italian salami, coarsely chopped |

Preheat oven to 350°

Squeeze out cooked spinach until quite dry, then mix in a bowl with ricotta, salami, the 3 eggs, half cup of parmesan. Add salt and pepper and blend together thoroughly. Oil a shallow baking dish and cover this dish with breadcrumbs. Spread the mixture evenly over this bed of crumbs. Cover mixture with the remaining ½ cup of parmesan, dot with butter and bake in preheated oven for half an hour or until crust is golden. This can be served as a first course or a luncheon main course. (Serves 6)

Fine Wines of ITALY

Italian wines come to us from a background of history, romance and scenic beauty that is unparalleled throughout the world, according to Dr. Piero Migone Italian Commercial Counselor in New York.

Dr. Migone, a long-time connoisseur on the finest Italy has to offer in the way of wines and foods, believes that the wines of Italy should be thought of as belonging to four different groups. First there are the Piedmont wines, then the Lake Garda wines, followed by the various Chiantis, and finally a group that includes famous wines from all over Italy. Dr. Migone categorized the wines of Italy for us in the following manner:

1. PIEDMONT WINES

The hilly Piedmont area is one of the most famous parts of Italy for wine production. Many of the finest wines there come from the hills of Monferrato, near Asti. For centuries Monferrato was an almost independent territory under the rule of the Monferrato family up until about the 18th century. Wines from this area can be compared with French burgundy wines as they have a lot of body, are strong and are particularly good with red meat and game. The red wines from Piedmont include Barbera, Barolo, Barbaresco, Griggolino and Freisa. A sampling of the white wines would include the famous Asti Spumante, known as the sparkling wine of Italy.

2. LAKE GARDA WINES

The next group from a famous wine area are those which come from Lake Garda. This region has a climate similar to the Riviera, a climate so mild that lemons and oranges are cultivated here. There is, for example, a town called "Limone" because of the lemons grown here, and, just north of Lago Garda, a township called "Arco" which is so warm, even in the winter, that one finds palm trees growing here. On the southeast shores of Lake Garda are the valleys that produce such fine wines. These wines are lighter than the Piedmontese. Some of the best known red wines from the Lago Garda area are: Valpolicella and Bardolino. The famous whites include Soave and Lugana.

3. CHIANTI

Chianti has enjoyed a long-standing popularity all over the world. Actually the name Chianti belongs to a small area between Florence and Siena. This is a very beautiful hilly countryside with alternating olive groves and vineyards, and hilltop churches dating back to 1000 A.D. surrounded by tall dark cypresses. Nearby is the beautiful town of San Gimignano with its "100" towers. Boccaccio was born not far from the Chianti region. Because of the indiscriminate use of the name "Chianti" there are now various seals to indicate the areas where the various "classic" Chiantis are produced — the rooster seal, the Eros seal and so on. Not only are there many varieties of Chiantis, but in addition there are other wines in Tuscany that are similar to the Chianti wines. Some of the finest and oldest vintage Chiantis are sold, not in the familiar straw fiasco but in the more conventional "claret" wine bottle.

4. Other table wines covering the rest of Italy

WHITE WINES

Famous for fine white wine similar to Riesling is the Alto Adige region and the Trentino region. There are also excellent white wines in Liguria from the sunny "Cinque Terre" — strong and very dry.

On the island of Sardinia there is the famous and sturdy Vernaccia, similar to a very dry pale sherry.

Just south of Tuscany is the very popular Orvieto wine in 2 varieties — Ab-

BEEF IN RED WINE (Manzo al Barolo)

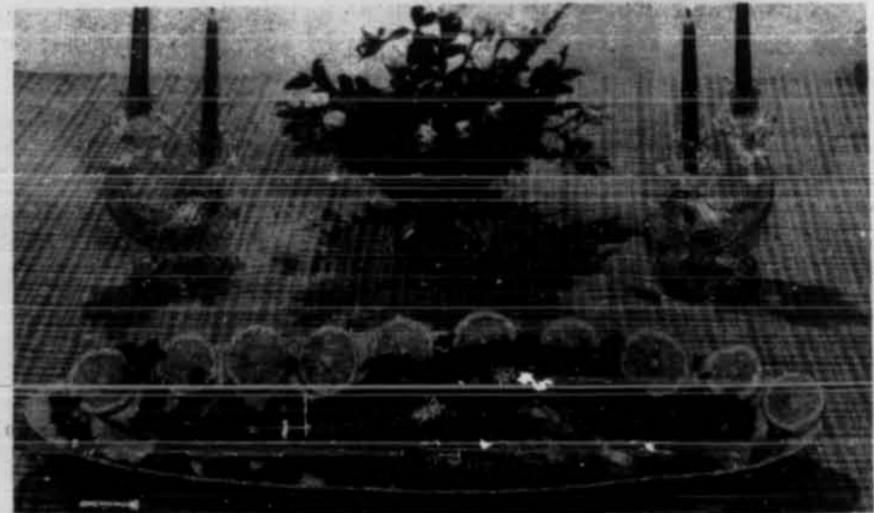

1½ pounds lean beef cubed (top round)	½ cup diced celery
1 diced potato	½ cup diced cauliflower
1 medium zucchini	1 diced carrot
salt and pepper	1 tomato, cut into pieces
½ cup Italian olive oil	3 cups dry red Barolo wine or Chianti

Mix meat and vegetables with exception of the zucchini and the tomatoes in a pyrex dish. Cover with wine and let stand for at least one hour, preferably more. Add pepper. Cover and put into a preheated oven of about 350°. Let cook for half hour. Add tomatoes and zucchini. Cook for another ten minutes. Uncover, add salt. According to the quantity of liquid, finish cooking covered or uncovered. When done (test with fork) meat should be well soaked but have just a little gravy. Add oil ten minutes before taking dish out of oven. (Serves 6.)

SPAGHETTI AL LA MATRICIANA

2 tablespoons Italian olive oil	½ lb. sliced prosciutto (or thinly sliced ham)
1 onion	½ lb. spaghetti
pinch of rosemary	¼ cup Frascati (or other dry white Italian wine) pinch of sage salt and pepper

Finely chop and sauté onion until transparent. Finely chop prosciutto or ham and add sage and rosemary to the onion. When meat begins to get crispy (takes about 7 minutes), add the wine and simmer sauce for about 10 minutes. Add salt and pepper to sauce over spaghetti and serve. (Serves 4.)

FISH FOR COMPLIMENTS. Seafood tastes that much better when prepared with Italian wines.

boccato and dry.

On the opposite side of the peninsula, in the Marche region, is the famous Verdicchio — so called because of its greenish cast. ("Verde" in Italian means green.)

The Capri is a rich, dry, golden-like wine which is not too dry as are all the wines of the Castelli near Rome: Frascati, Marino, etc.

The Lachrima Christi comes from vines grown on the very slopes of Mt. Vesuvius.

RED WINES

Of the red wines in other regions, one of the best is the famous Rossese of the Italian Riviera which is becoming very rare.

Near Bologna we find the sparkling, rich Lambrusco.

South of Orvieto near Lake Bolsena on volcanic slopes, the strong and mellow Montefiascone wines, the most famous of which is called "Est, Est, Est".

There are hundreds of other kinds of red wines in Italy, some of which, like the very strong red wines of Puglia, are exported all over the world to mix with foreign red wines and introduce some of the world's most famous brands.

TESTO DEL MFSSAGGIO DELL'AMBASCIATOPE SERGIO FENOALTEA PER IL XX ANNIVERSARIO DELL'ESPERIMENTO DI FEPMI

Washington Dec. -La ricorrenza odierna -che abbiamo commemorato ieri presso l'Universita' di Chicago e che oggi si celebra a Roma -rievoca una di quelle poche date nella storia della civiltà che abbiano veramente segnato l'inizio di un'era. Vent'anni fa, nel segreto imposto dalle circostanze, l'ingegno dell'Uomo estraeva dal nucleo dell'atomo una nuova forma di energia le cui infinite possibilita' di utilizzazione per il bene ed il progresso dell'umana' la Scienza ha appena cominciato ad esplorare.

A quella storica scoperta, che il 2 dicembre 1942 trovò nella pila atomica di Chicago la prima sperimentale realizzazione attraverso la produzione di energia nucleare mediante una reazione a catena, e' legato il nome dell'italiano Enrico Fermi. Il grande scienziato, sin da allora considerato con l'inglese Rutherford ed il danese Bohr uno dei fondatori della Fisica Nucleare, già nel 1934 aveva realizzato presso l'Universita' di Roma la prima fissione dell'atomo di uranio e nel 1938 aveva vinto il Premio Nobel per i suoi studi sui neutroni lenti. Qui in America Fermi ideò e costruì la pila, preparò e diresse l'esperimento critico, fino alla morte gli studi e le ricerche sui prototipi delle centrali nucleari.

Enrico Fermi, il cui nome e' altamente onorato in Italia come negli Stati Uniti che gli hanno dedicato un Premio scientifico annuale oggi altrettanto ambito del Premio Nobel ed uno dei piu' importanti Progetti di ricerca avanzata sui reattori, si ricollega nel nostro orgoglioso ricordo ad altri Italiani che, per straordinaria predilezione del fato, restano legati alle tappe piu' significative del progresso delle Scienze: dal poliedrico Leonardo al padre della Fisica Galileo Galilei, da Alessandro Volta che con la sua pila inaugurò nel 1799 l'era dell'elettrici

-ta' e Guglielmo Marconi, che cent'anni dopo aprì l'era della comunicazioni radiotelegrafiche.

E forse non sarebbe retorico collegare il ricordo del fondatore dell'era nucleare a quello di Cristoforo Colombo che inauguro' l'era moderna. Questo accostamento, che per gli Americani e' naturale quando onorano un nome italiano, fu fatto del resto vent'anni or sono allorchè il Professor Compton, responsabile del Progetto Atomico, nel comunicare telefonicamente in linguaggio convenzionale, la riuscita dell'esperimento al Rettore dell'Università di Harvard, così si esprime: "Le interessera' apprendere che il Navigatore Italiano e' or ora sbarcato nel Nuovo Mondo".

Con orgoglio e commozione profonda celebriamo dunque insieme questo anniversario che accomuna ancora una volta americani ed italiani in un grande servizio reso al progresso dell'umanita'.
