My Acquisition Target: Transportation, Logistics & Industrials

Throughout my career, these two sectors have been of particular interest.

Whether advising companies on mergers and acquisitions in Europe and Asia, investing in logistical infrastructure in Asia, or leading a group of companies at the intersection of transport & logistics and manufacturing – these sectors have consistently been my area of focus.

In April 2016, I successfully sourced and executed an MBI, acquiring Movico from its founder. Over the past nine years as CEO, I have grown the Group ninefold through both organic expansion and strategic acquisitions in the Netherlands and Germany.

About Me

I am an internationally experienced executive with a strong background in investment banking, private investments, and operational leadership. I am married, have three children, and live near Zandvoort Beach in the Netherlands.

My career began in investment banking in Amsterdam and Singapore, where I developed a solid foundation in strategic advisory, capital markets, and complex transactions. I then transitioned from advisory into investing, focusing primarily on opportunities involving logistical bottlenecks and operational complexity. I lived and worked for more than seven years in Asia, with Singapore as my base.

I hold a Master's degree in Business Administration from Erasmus University Rotterdam and completed an Executive MBA at Washington University in St. Louis, USA. This combination of academic training and hands-on leadership experience enables me to bridge strategy, investment, and execution effectively.
