Milk Chocolate
Covered Figs 250g £13.99

The Rango confectionery company was born in Cassano all'Ionio, in the Province of Cosenza, home of the production of figs. Antonio Rango, taking up the ancient family traditions, launched himself into this adventure with enthusiasm and dynamism, precisely to pass on to the new generations the philosophy and the value of "things once made at home". The dried figs of Rango, in fact, are produced with craftsmanship, carefully selected and processed exclusively by hand without the aid of preservatives and dyes strictly following ancient family recipes, jealously guarded.

Panforte Cake 100g £5.99

For three generations, Marabissi has epitomised Italian biscuit production. The history of Marabissi began more than sixty years ago with amaretti, ricciarelli, and Tuscan cantucci.

The motto is simple- "We have a passion for learning and improving. In everything we think, say, and do, quality is the mirror image of our knowledge and skill - the fruit of our willingness to improve. Each day offers new opportunities to learn and develop." Marabissi continues to produce the finest biscuits, following time-honoured traditions, appealing to customers all over the world.

Boella & Sorrisi is a tale of two families united by passion for artisan chocolate and traditional pastries. It all began in 1885 in Corneliano d'Alba when the Boella family embarked on their journey, crafting exquisite panettone.

Meanwhile, in 1960, the Sorrisi family, led by their entrepreneurial spirit, established their own path in the chocolatier world.

Fast forward to the present day, Boella & Sorrisi stands proudly under the guidance of Elena Caprino and Stefano Silvola, the descendants of these two remarkable lineages.

With a shared passion for their craft, they have seamlessly blended their professional lives and personal bonds, united by a common love for leavened delights and chocolate.

Strawberry Extra Jam 400g £8.99

Wild Blueberries Extra Jam 400g

£8.99

The story began back in 1928, when the Chiaverini Brothers established a small business to produce jams and preserves. The selection of fruit was rigorous, and all produce came from local farmers straight to the Chiaverini kitchens. There, it was transformed into excellent jams, then packaged in small wooden tubs called "MASTELLI" and delivered by bicycles in wicker baskets to the shops around the city.

Today, Chiaverini jam, produced in the outskirts of Florence, is the most beloved product in Florentine pantries, especially for its offering of original and unique flavours.

A single commanding olive tree stands tall and proud over Muraglia's 40 hectares, and that tree has watched the seasons and the harvests for over 450 years.

Today this Apulian family-run business is best known for its traditional methods, its award-winning oils and its magnificent range of the most beautiful bottles and tins that will grace any home. Still, to this day the olives are carefully picked by hand and pressed cold in an ancient stone press. Yet it is often the stories behind the artworks that the consumers most want to ask about: the Lobster, the Sardines, the Rooster and of course the world -famous Rainbow.

Yiayia and friends re-imagines and re-introduces traditional notions of life, superior quality food products, culinary objects and epicurean artefacts of yesteryear.

At the heart of this design project, "Yiayia" ("granny" in Greek) is glorified in a key-storyline as the super-powerful, all-knowing but the also discreet person that she is.

Together with her "friends" from both the human and animal kingdom the art of growing, cooking and sharing food, along with everything that is attached to it, is remembered, re-introduced, and re-imagined for generations to come.

Cristina and Silvia Crotti were born into a family where good taste and a flare for style have sat side-by-side for many generations.

For several years, both sisters worked in the family fashion business, Maska, until their father and founder, decided to retire. This was the start of Il Borgo del Balsamico: a female-owned company which brings the know-how of the fashion industry to the fine food market.

Their famous Aceto Balsamico Tradizionale di Reggio Emilia DOP is the embodiment of supreme quality, a traditional balsamic which has been produced in the region for centuries.

Their wider range of Balsamic Vinegars all perfectly styled in their own most beautiful bottles and labels, step outside the normal expectations to explore new flavours and new culinary uses.
