INVESTMENT STRATEGY

A quantitative, systematic market-neutral strategy that seeks to generate returns from structural pricing inefficiencies across centralized digital asset markets. The strategy trades BTC and ETH spot, perpetual swaps and expiry futures, primarily through cross-exchange arbitrage, funding and basis arbitrage, term-structure opportunities, and market making. The portfolio uses leverage to scale low-volatility spread and carry opportunities. Returns are driven primarily by funding-rate dispersion, futures basis, and cross-exchange price differences, with risk managed through diversification, exchange-level exposure limits, position sizing and liquidity constraints.
