FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE Launchpad Quest Debuts as a New Digital Discovery Hub for Libraries

Solon, Ohio — March 16, 2026 — Playaway Products has announced the introduction of Launchpad Quest, a 21.5-inch interactive touchscreen hub, purpose-built for libraries and shared community spaces serving children ages 3–10.

Pre-loaded with up to 150 curated educational apps, games, and storybooks, Launchpad Quest requires no downloads, updates, Wi-Fi setup, or license management. Each device arrives ready to use, providing libraries with a turnkey digital learning solution for public spaces.

Developed in collaboration with library systems nationwide, Quest was created in response to growing demand for a non-circulating, large-format digital experience.

“As libraries evolve into community technology hubs, Quest provides a durable, turnkey solution designed specifically for how families use library spaces today,” said Stephanie Trivison, VP, Product & Marketing at Playaway Products.

The commercial-grade touchscreen features large, touch-friendly icons, picture-based navigation with narration, six core subject areas, and age-based filtering to support independent discovery. Content partners include Smithsonian, Hasbro, Highlights, Smile and Learn, and Lightbox Learning.

Designed with administrators in mind, Quest eliminates ongoing tech management and includes a password-protected portal with device controls and aggregate usage insights—collecting no personal data.

“Quest exists because libraries told us what they needed,” Trivison added. “We built it side by side with them to strengthen digital access in shared spaces.”

Launchpad Quest debuts at PLA and is available for pre-sale beginning March 16, 2026. For more information, visit playaway.com or contact marketing@playaway.com.
