Selene 49 “Ruth Pearl II” – Proven Bluewater Passage Maker | Featured by The 71 Percent

Step aboard one of the most talked-about Selene 49s in the world—Ruth Pearl II, the very vessel followed by thousands through The 71 Percent’s Pacific crossing journey. This is not just a yacht; it’s a proven, ocean-going platform that has already demonstrated what most boats only promise.

Built by the renowned Selene shipyard, a leader in long-range trawler yachts since 1998, the Selene 49 blends timeless craftsmanship with true passagemaking capability.

A Yacht with a Story—and the Miles to Back It Up

This Selene 49 has earned its reputation the hard way—crossing open ocean, navigating remote island chains, and supporting full-time live-aboard life. Documented extensively online, this yacht has completed major legs of a Pacific crossing from Australia toward North America, showcasing real-world reliability, comfort, and efficiency.

Designed for Serious Cruising

The Selene 49 is purpose-built for long-range exploration, offering:

- Full-displacement hull for efficiency and stability offshore
- Long-range fuel capacity for extended passages
- Protected pilothouse with excellent visibility for passagemaking
- Wide side decks and secure walkaround design
- Engine room access designed for owner-operator maintenance
- Classic Selene interior with warm joinery and liveaboard comfort

Whether you’re planning the Great Loop, coastal cruising, or bluewater passages, this yacht is engineered to take you there safely and comfortably.

Liveaboard Capability Meets Ocean-Going Strength

One of the standout features of this particular vessel is its real-world livability. As showcased by its current high-profile owners, the yacht supports:

- Extended off-grid cruising
- Efficient onboard systems for long passages
- Comfortable accommodations for full-time living
- Ample storage for provisions, tools, and spare parts

This is a yacht equally suited for adventure and everyday life at sea.

Ruth Pearl II will not be available for long.
