

LONE ROCK EXECUTIVE LEADERSHIP SUMMIT

Sundance Executive Leadership Summit Overview

September 27-29, 2026 | Sundance Resort, Utah

An intimate, invitation-only gathering of senior learning, talent, and training executives. This think-tank style forum blends meaningful discussion, industry insights, and breathtaking surroundings in the Rocky Mountains.

A Summit Designed for Leaders Who Shape Leaders

Step away from the day-to-day and join an exclusive gathering of senior learning, talent, and leadership development executives. The Lone Rock Executive Leadership Summit brings together a small, curated group of top L&D leaders for a two-day, all-expenses-paid strategy experience designed to challenge assumptions, sharpen priorities, and redefine what leadership development can—and should—deliver.

The State of the Industry

A candid, data-backed look at the trends, challenges, and pressures facing leadership development today.

Leadership Priorities & Breakout Discussions

Small-group conversations exploring what's working (and what isn't) in developing leaders at scale.

Panel Sessions with Experienced Practitioners

Learn from leaders who are solving real performance and capability gaps inside complex organizations.

The Four Critical Areas Where Leaders Accelerate Results

Deep-dive conversations into the competencies that most influence results, accountability, and execution.

The Organizational Friction Points That Slow Teams Down

Explore the root causes of misalignment, decision bottlenecks, and underperformance.

Strategy Workshop: "Therefore, What?"

Translate insights into actionable priorities your organization can implement immediately.

What Past Attendees Are Saying About the Summit.

There's something powerful about being in a room full of people who truly care about building better leaders, not just better operators.

What stood out to me were the practical conversations focused on results instead of soft skills. We explored how leaders create clarity, accelerate decisions, and generate real momentum. Beyond the content, the environment and quiet beauty of Sundance reminded me that leadership breakthroughs often happen when you have space to think.

Lone Rock Leadership didn't just host an event; they created an experience.

Regina Dunning

Vice President, Learning & Organizational Development
SThree

The Lone Rock Leadership Summit was beautifully orchestrated, featuring an impactful agenda and breathtaking scenery. My first visit to Sundance, Utah left a lasting impression, and I look forward to returning someday.

The summit brought together leaders from various industries, creating an impressive group that shared valuable industry and leadership insights through conversations and think tank sessions. It was a wonderful experience, providing an opportunity to share knowledge and continue learning.

Thank you to the Lone Rock team for including me in this remarkable event!

Meet the Summit Hosts

Russ Hill

Co-Founder

Russ discovered this breakthrough approach after experiencing his own leadership failure—being ranked the lowest-performing leader in his company. Rather than accept mediocrity, he immersed himself in intensive development at Gallup and Wharton, ultimately rising to oversee national media operations. This personal transformation revealed a critical insight: most leadership training focuses on soft skills instead of business outcomes, which is why 75% of organizations rate their programs as ineffective.

His methodology was tested and refined through nearly a decade of executive consulting across 14 countries, where he delivered culture transformation projects that moved the needle on actual business metrics. At Spectrum Association Management, he helped scale operations from a family startup to managing 900+ communities. At Bonneville International, he turned around underperforming media brands by focusing on the one thing that matters: changing how leaders think and act to accelerate results.

As Co-Founder of Lone Rock Leadership, Russ specializes in fixing what's broken about leadership development. His Lead In 30 methodology abandons traditional classroom lectures for practical, results-driven sessions that help leaders master creating clarity around what matters most, building genuine alignment, and generating movement by rewriting the mental scripts that derail performance.

Russ is coauthor of the new book Deliver. As well as The Great Resignation, Remoteability, and Decide to Lead, and hosts The Lead In 30 Podcast.

Russ Hill solves the $400 billion leadership training problem by transforming underperforming leaders into executives who deliver measurable business results. As Co-Founder of Lone Rock Leadership and creator of the LeaderOS framework, he has helped Fortune 100 executives at Amazon, Walmart, General Motors, and Lockheed Martin become "3rd Leaders" who create Clarity, Alignment, and Movement—the only three competencies that actually drive organizational performance.

Jared Jones

Co-Founder

Jared Jones solves what most executives struggle with: transforming organizational culture from abstract "soft skills" into operational drivers of business results. As Co-Founder of Lone Rock Consulting, he has managed over $25 million in leadership development services, helping Fortune 500 executives at Lockheed Martin, Cigna, and Johnson & Johnson build cultures that actually deliver measurable performance instead of just engagement surveys.

Jared's breakthrough in making culture operational was developed during his 17-year tenure at Partners In Leadership, where he discovered why most culture initiatives fail. While other consultants focus on awareness and behaviors, Jared developed systematic methodologies to define, measure, and transform the mindsets that drive business outcomes. His approach consistently delivered both immediate performance improvements and long-term organizational transformation because it attacks the root cause: leaders who don't know how to create Clarity, Alignment, and Movement.

His unique combination of organizational development expertise and technology solutions background—including work with Bose, Ocean Spray Cranberries, and Titleist—enables him to create scalable, measurable approaches to leadership effectiveness. Unlike traditional culture programs that rely on competency models, Jared focuses on what Harvard Business School research confirms matters: helping leaders rewrite the mental scripts that create silos, blame, and status quo thinking.

As Co-Founder of Lone Rock Leadership, Jared specializes in practical application of the three competencies that drive results: creating clarity around key outcomes, building genuine alignment through structured dialogue, and generating movement by addressing the biases that derail performance. His data-driven approach has earned multi-year client relationships because it delivers what traditional training cannot—leaders who drive results while building ownership. Jared is a national bestselling author and enjoys life in Seattle with his family.

David Nelson

Head of Product

David Nelson transforms managers of processes and rules into leaders who create genuine team ownership through research-driven leadership development. As Head of Product, David leads the research, development, and course design of Lead In 30, Adapt In 30, Power In 30, and Decide In 30, along with Lone Rock's signature 30-day cohort-based leadership journey. His expertise in instructional design ensures complex leadership concepts become accessible and actionable for busy executives.

His deep understanding of leadership development methodology came from his 14-year tenure at Crucial Learning, where he progressed from Manager of Client Success to the Senior Faculty. This comprehensive experience across training development, delivery, and client success gave him unique insights into what drives sustainable behavior change in leaders across industries and leadership levels.

David's expertise in scaling leadership transformation stems from his belief that a speaker's greatest responsibility is to inform, inspire, and energize audiences with actionable insights. Speaking annually to over 5,000 professionals at Fortune 500 organizations including Google, NASA, McDonald's, and Prudential, he has shared the stage with renowned experts including Dan Pink, Liz Wiseman, Greg McKeown, and Dan Medina. His ability to translate complex leadership concepts into practical strategies has made him a sought-after facilitator for diverse audiences.

Kim Tolmie

Director of Faculty

Kim Tolmie solves what Harvard Business School identified as the leadership development crisis: 75% of organizations rate their programs as ineffective because they focus on soft skills instead of business results. As Director of Faculty at Lone Rock Leadership, Kim leverages her experience designing award-winning leadership programs that improved senior leader effectiveness by 20 percentage points at The Coca-Cola Company. Coca-Cola's CEO made her programs mandatory—not because they felt good, but because they worked. Her innovative approach achieved what most training cannot: a 4.5 out of 5 ROI rating with 90% of participants finding sessions effective.

Kim's comprehensive understanding of what actually changes leader behavior spans telecommunications, manufacturing, healthcare, transportation, and consumer goods industries. At The Coca-Cola Company, she utilized practical, immediately applicable experiences that leaders could implement to drive real results. Her digital coaching programs for 1,000+ senior leaders achieved a Net Promoter Score of 50 by focusing on outcomes rather than abstract leadership theories. Her application of MindGym's facilitation techniques and partnerships with Harvard Business Publishing, Duke OE, DDI and BTS ensured cutting-edge delivery .

As Director of Faculty and Consulting Partner with Lone Rock Leadership, Kim oversees the growth and development of our facilitation team to address expanding needs. And, she consults with clients to apply Lone Rock Leadership principles to improve business performance.

Kim completed graduate studies at Boston University and dual degrees from UNC Chapel Hill. She resides in Atlanta with her family.
