CLOSING REMARKS 15

This is the planning edition, published Nov. 18, 2026, with 111 events. The list froze Nov. 13; events announced after that date appear in the final edition on Jan. 6, 2027 and at onyourmark.bio.

Listings are free to every organizer and are never conditioned on buying anything. Advertising is marked as advertising.

On Your Mark and Big4Bio have no affiliation with J.P. Morgan Chase & Co. The J.P. Morgan Healthcare Conference runs Jan. 11–14, 2027.

HOW TO READ AN ENTRY

Every entry says what we know and what we do not know yet. A blank field is published as blank; nothing is filled in with a guess. Every event name is a live link: click it to open the host's registration or information page.

WHY WE'RE BACK

On Your Mark is back because you kept asking for it.

We've worked the last few JPM Weeks a different way — a couple of pre-conference events with partners and other organizations, and they were worth doing. But the request that kept arriving had nothing to do with those. It was for the guide.

So here it is. And this past year made the case for it better than we could have.

The dealmaking returned first: 77 biotech acquisitions announced in 2026 by early November, carrying $105.9 billion in upfront value, and roughly twice that counting milestones.

Then the public markets reopened, through a door nobody expected. Twenty-seven companies went public by reverse merger this year, enough to rival traditional IPOs outright. Their management teams will be in San Francisco in January.

And the approvals held. CDER cleared 46 novel drugs by early October, matching all of 2025 with a quarter still to run, in a year when the agency had no confirmed commissioner. Whether 2026 lands among the strongest years on record is still open. The mark is 59, set in 2018, and we'll know by the January edition.

Put those together and you get what this guide is for: more companies with news, more investors with capital to place, and a week where much of the real work happens in the rooms around the conference rather than inside it.

That's what we cover. Not the main stage — the breakfasts, the receptions, the partnering forums, the coworking spaces and the 6:30 a.m. run.

This is the planning edition, out while your calendar is still open. The final edition follows Jan. 6. Both are free, with nothing to fill in, and onyourmark.bio carries more than 100 events between them, updated hourly.

Our thanks to the hosts who sent their details, to Aaron Blotnick, whose JPM event list remains the best independent record of the week, and to everyone who asked when this was coming back.

You're the reason it did. Have a good week in San Francisco.

Biotech Showcase™

Co-produced by DEMYCOLTON informa

Where biotech's biggest deals begin

JANUARY 11–13, 2027 | SAN FRANCISCO

For 19 years, Biotech Showcase has set itself apart as the definitive destination for biotech dealmaking—and this year, that distinction has never been more decisive.

Over 3,000 global biopharma leaders. 1,100+ investors commanding more than USD 400 billion in capital. 2,000+ unique companies. 40+ countries. 250+ innovators ready to unveil what's next. And more than 6,000 one-to-one meetings engineered for outcomes that move life science forward.

With DigiMed Showcase and Seed Showcase seamlessly integrated under one roof, and an expertly curated program covering dealmaking, policy, and the future of therapeutics, Biotech Showcase delivers what no concurrent event can: focus, access, and ROI you can measure.

THE TECHBIO SIDE OF JPM WEEK

Aaron Blotnick
SynBioBeta and Bits in Bio linkedin.com/in/aaronblotnick

Most of JPM Week happens in hotel ballrooms. A growing part of it happens in someone's office at 8 p.m.

That part is TechBio: the companies building AI scientists, biological foundation models, lab software and the compute behind them, plus the founders, investors and communities around them. It runs on a different calendar, in different rooms, with different rules.

This section is for you if you've done JPM for years and never set foot in that world. It won't list events. The listings do that. It tells you who's there, how it works, where to start, and how to get in.

WHO IS HERE

- FutureHouse and Edison Scientific. FutureHouse is the SF nonprofit building AI agents that do science. Edison Scientific spun out in late 2025 to commercialize Kosmos, its AI scientist.
- Biohub. Chan Zuckerberg's science arm, now putting most of its weight behind AI models of biology.
- Benchling. The R&D software most of these companies already run on, now partnering on AI models with Lilly TuneLab.
- Modal, Nebius, AWS. Compute companies that host their own JPM events now, not just sponsor them.
- SignalFire. Its foundation model breakfast put Insilico, Latent Labs and Outpost Bio on one panel last year.
- NFX, Lexi Ventures, Nest Catalyst, age1, Amino Capital. Early-stage investors who host, not just attend.
- Prima Mente, Sanai, Mithrl, KAMI Think Tank. AI-for-biopharma teams running panels and mixers.
- Nucleate, Bits in Bio, Biomixer, BioPioneers. The communities that fill the rooms.
- Berkeley SkyDeck, UCSF, UC Davis, MIT. University showcases with dozens of startups in one place.

HOW IT WORKS

These events post late. Most go up on Luma between mid-December and the week itself. My own list for last year didn't exist until December 13.

They're free or close to it. Most are "request to join," which means a person reads your name before you get in. Venues are bars, galleries and coworking spaces, not ballrooms. Formats are no-slides happy hours, early breakfasts, and reverse pitches where investors pitch founders.

WHERE TO START

If you only make four:

1. Nucleate's reception at the Exploratorium. Wednesday, Jan. 13. The biggest room of the week, with founders and investors at every stage.
2. A university showcase. Berkeley, UCSF or UC Davis. The startups are pre-sorted and the conversations are easy.
3. An AI infrastructure event. Look for whoever is hosting compute this year. That's where the technical founders are.
4. A small breakfast. Fifteen people, one topic, 8 a.m. The best signal of the week.

WHAT CHANGED

Compute companies went from sponsors to hosts. The conversation moved from "can AI find drugs" to foundation models, AI scientists, and who owns the data. Longevity also grew its own track, from a pitch day the Saturday before to a symposium at Stanford on Friday.

HOW TO GET INVITED

Ask. Most hosts approve anyone who fills in a real company and a LinkedIn. If you're turned down, message the host directly with one line on why you're there.

Follow the communities in December, when the invites go out. Bring a founder with you. And host something small yourself. The people invited everywhere are the ones who invite others.

JPM WEEK RESOURCES

Other things worth having open during JPM Week.

J.P. Morgan Healthcare Conference

jpmorgan.com

The conference's own page. Confirms the dates, states plainly that attendance is by invitation and non-transferable, and warns about third-party sites selling hotel rates or conference access they can't deliver. Worth reading before you book anything.

BIO's JPM Week Events Guide app

bpjw.bio.org

BIO's free events app. Built for your phone during the week rather than for planning before it — the one to have open when you're walking between meetings and the schedule has already changed twice.

Bio Founder GPS

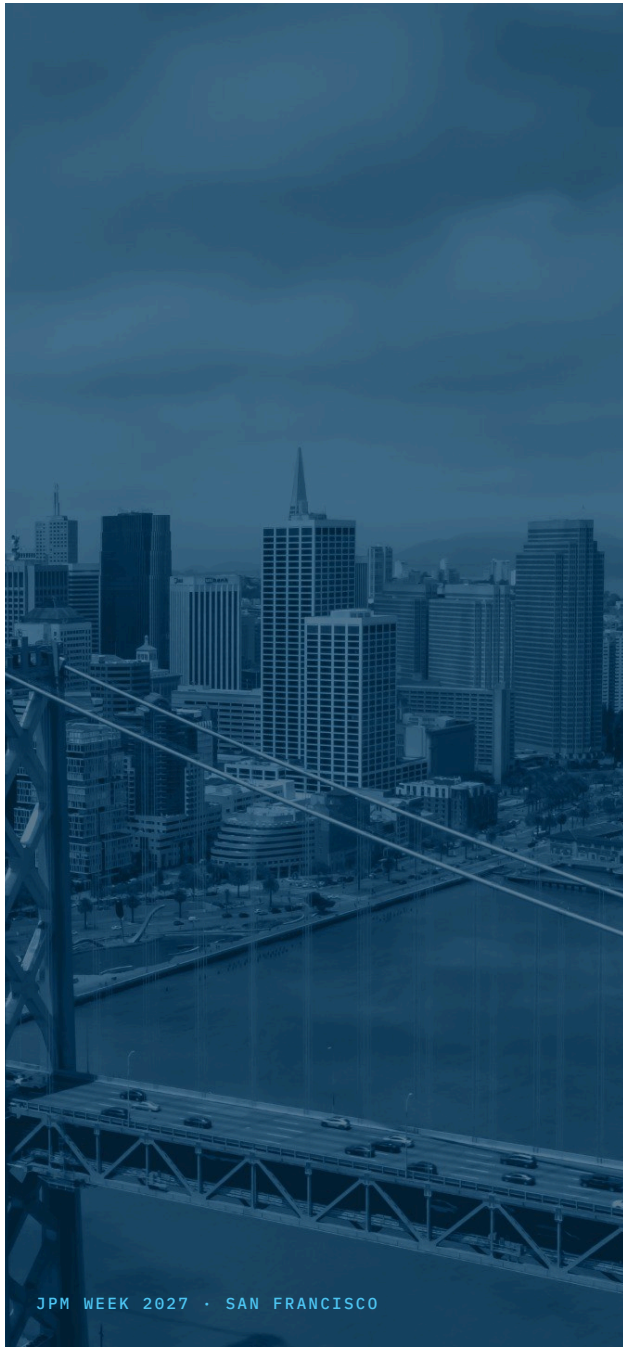

biofounder.io

Vadim Shepel's newsletter for scientist-founders. His JPM 2027 piece works backwards from the conference to a fundraising timeline, and comes with a free planner for tracking who you're meeting and what has to follow.

WELCOME FROM CLS

On behalf of California Life Sciences and the almost 16,000 life sciences companies who call our great state home, I'd like to extend a warm welcome as we head into the 45th Annual J.P. Morgan Healthcare Conference and the week of fantastic industry events that come along with it.

JPM is one of the most defining weeks of the year for our industry, setting the tone for the discoveries, partnerships, and headwinds our ecosystem will navigate in the year ahead. There's no better place for these conversations to happen than the Golden State. The most recent jobs report from the Biotechnology Innovation Organization (BIO), Council of State Bioscience Associations (CSBA), and TEConomy Partners continues to show California leading the U.S. innovation economy, generating more than $396 billion in economic impact and supporting more than 334,000 industry jobs. None of that would be possible without the dedication and entrepreneurial spirit of the academic researchers, early-stage founders, and global leaders committed to delivering innovative solutions for patients.

This world-class ecosystem hasn't been built by accident, and sustaining it takes the same deliberate effort that created it. As China and other countries compete aggressively for the same companies, capital, and talent, our leadership in biomedical innovation is not guaranteed, and protecting it is some of the most important work we do. CLS is proud to take on that challenge as California's most influential life sciences advocacy and membership organization alongside organizations of every size.

I look forward to connecting with the innovators shaping the future of health throughout the week, and to continuing these industry-defining conversations well beyond the conference floor.

Sincerely,

Mike Guerra
President & CEO, California Life Sciences
