18 November 2025

AUDD passes $1b in transactions on Stellar blockchain

Highlights

- AUDD passes more than $1b in transactions on the Stellar blockchain alone
- Follows separate recent milestone of AUDD becoming the first Australian Dollar stablecoin to be made available on Coinbase
- Novatti continues to hold a 57% non-controlling interest in AUDD's issuer, AUDC Pty Ltd

Novatti Group Limited (ASX: NOV) (Novatti or the Company), a payments leader bridging traditional payments and regulated digital finance, is pleased to advise that AUDD stablecoin has passed $1b in transactions on the Stellar blockchain.

AUDD is issued by AUDC Pty Ltd ("AUDC"), in which Novatti continues to hold a 57% non-controlling interest.

This milestone follows AUDD becoming the first Australia Dollar-backed stablecoin to be listed on Coinbase's retail platform, on 29 September 2025. Importantly, the $1b transaction volumes on Stellar's blockchain do not include those undertaken on Coinbase, or through other tier one blockchain ecosystems, including Ethereum.

The rapid growth and growing adoption of AUDD reflects its accelerating use in digital payments and decentralised finance (DeFi) applications.

Commenting on this announcement, Novatti CEO, Mark Healy, said: "AUDD reaching $1b in transactions on Stellar is a significant milestone that underpins its status as the leading Australia Dollar-backed stablecoin. AUDD's growing use highlights its potential as a trusted stablecoin to drive continued adoption in payments and DeFi more broadly, while operating within Australia's strict regulatory framework."

"Novatti continues to be exposed to any further upside in AUDD's use and adoption through its 57% interest in AUDC, the issuer of AUDD. Novatti's interest in AUDC is valued at $7m based on pricing for AUDC's seed round announced in August 2025 and again validates Novatti's incubation of AUDD."

Importantly, all client funds backing AUDD continue to be held in accounts with Australian Deposit Taking Institutions, and AUDC maintains stringent anti-money laundering and counter-terrorism financing frameworks, consistent with Australian regulatory expectations. This announcement has been approved for release by Mark Healy, CEO and the Board.
