French tips get a luxurious spin with sumptuous colours like swirling ocean blues and molten gold. Soft pastel hues also make a statement when used for all-over colour manicures.Mocha Mousse, Pantone's colour of the year, is set to become a staple in salons due to its versatile neutral tone. Hanna describes it as "grounded and comforting," perfect for a year focused on simplicity and warmth. Pair short, rounded nails with dark polist shades like deep red or navy for a polished look.Velvet nails and magnetic gels are continuing their rise, offering soft shimmer that moves with the light. Russian manicures and cuticle care will also gain traction as beauty fans prioritize quality, durability, and longevity. Simple, single-colour nail art looks great with glossy sable brown polishes that last for weeks.Blooming gel polishes create a custom watercolour effect on nails, perfect for aura nails, marbled effects, or soft floral patterns. With endless possibilities in colour and layering, blooming gel designs are ideal for 2025's focus on creativity and versatility. Get ready to take your nail game to the next level with these top trends!The nail game is expected to get even more exciting in 2025. Soft, nuanced shades like beige, muted pink, and taupe are gaining popularity for their effortless pairing with minimal or intricate designs. "Understated beauty" is dominating the scene, making these classic looks a great option for any occasion.Bold, abstract patterns offer endless customization options to suit individual styles. A "witchy tarot" design painted on a sheer neutral-pink base is just one example of how creative freedom can be harnessed. Metallic accents add edge and versatility, making them easy to pair with other trends.Layered nail art combines textures, colors, and finishes for depth and dimension. Techniques like chrome overlays, translucent layers, and tiny accents give nails a rich and complex look, perfect for those who love experimenting with their nail art.Builder gel is the starting point for creating these unique designs. With 2025 leaning towards more experimental designs, this trend is ideal for those looking to push boundaries.Nail Experts Predict Top Trends for 2025 According to session manicurist Ami Streets, navy blue will be a standout colour in 2025. Julia Diogo agrees, saying it's a chic, deep hue that looks great as an edgier manicure colour while still being softer and more elegant than black.The experts also predict pastels will make a resurgence next year, but with a pared-back approach. International nail artist Julia Diogo expects milky shades to be popular in the spring, providing a fresh and clean aesthetic.Marbling is set to take off as a trend in 2025, inspired by natural events like the sunrise or ocean. Street also mentions call it Tiffany blue, turquoise or aqua, which might just be the breakout shade of 2025. Texture will be huge next year, with velvet finishes looking set to adorn everyone's nails. Pro nail artist Jessica White declares that minimalist nail art isn't going anywhere, and designs like micro French tips have become staples because they're wearable and versatile. Julia Diogo is confident that dimension will continue to dominate in 2025. Experts predict that 3D nail art was one of the biggest trends of 2024 and it's expected to be a major trend next year too.Nail enthusiasts can expect a variety of exciting trends in 2025, from monochromatic designs to more refined adornments. Melanie Graves' recent post highlights the growing popularity of 3D swirls and outlines, which offer a playful touch for those looking to try something new.While 3D texture and nail decorations will likely continue to be in style, Streets predicts a shift towards a more minimalist approach to embellishments next year. Instead of over-the-top decorations, pearls and crystals are expected to take centre stage. Wendy's shimmering manicure showcases this trend perfectly.In terms of colour, linen pastels and milky hues will gain popularity for spring, but deep, rich shades such as chocolate brown, merlot, and burgundy will remain dominant throughout the year. Lauren's sultry red manicure is a great example of this trend.As we enter warmer months, oranges and yellows are expected to be huge hits for manicures, with bold orange and energising yellow colours adding a lively touch. Celestial yellow, in particular, is predicted to be everywhere, inspired by otherworldly elements like the sun, moon, and stars.Chrome nails have been a staple of 2024, but experts believe they may start to feel overdone as we move into 2025. Instead, there will be a shift towards more subtle chrome accents and softer detailing for a more understated take on the trend.Overall, 2025 is set to bring a bold new array of manicure trends that focus on personal expression, classic shapes, and intricate nail art.Mirror nails are the ultimate statement-making trend, without being over the top," she explains. Also, we got some insider tips from celebrity nail artist extraordinaire and Senior Mylee Ambassador, Tinu Bello. She predicts the rise of various designs from mirror nails to oyster-inspired manis. "2025 will be about practicality. I predict a lot of short lengths, especially in a soft square tapered shape. These are super low maintenance and versatile for an everyday mani," explains Tinu. As 2025 is in full swing, nail trends are shaping up to be versatile, expressive, and filled with nostalgia. Whether you prefer the glimmer of a cat-eye effect or the playful elegance of a shorter length, there's a look for every personality. Embrace these trends, experiment with shapes and colours, and let your nails be a canvas for self-expression.Read on for expert insights into the key nail colours, shapes, and trends you'll want to try this year. The ice cream manicure mimics the soft scoop of delicious ice cream. It's an ultra-glossy manicure with a sheer pink base and sometimes an ombr creamy white french tip finish. This trend leans into subtlety and elegance, it's extremely versatile as it suitable for everyday wear or a high-fashion event. This soft, creamy shade - reminiscent of pale sunshine - flatters a variety of skin tones while adding a subtle pop of colour. Unlike vibrant yellows, butter yellow strikes the perfect balance between playful and sophisticated, making it a versatile choice. "Less is more for 2025 when it comes to our nails," says Tinu. "Clean nails are all about sheer or barely-there polish in shades of ballerina pinks, milky whites, and soft nudes. This year we will see them paired with a high-gloss finish and short lengths for a minimalist aesthetic." Milky shades have been trending since 2023, and in 2025, lavender milk will be the shade to try. "Milky lavender shades will be big," Julia confirms. "Biosculpture does a great shade called Fluttering Lavender for this." Lavender hues have a timeless appeal and, although they're often associated with spring, they're perfect year-round. "Thanks to Pantone's colour of the year Mocha Mousse, we can expect to see an array of light, creamy brown shades," says Tinu, "This is incredibly subtle and versatile, working for all occasions." She recommends trying Mylees Cozy Nights Gel Polish which "is the perfect creamy beige with a neutral undertone." "Cat eye manicures will be huge," explains Julia: "Its all about the holographic and reflective manicures at the moment, which will definitely follow into the new year. Hailey Bieber was recently seen sporting the trend in an orangey-brown shade." "Mirror nails are the ultimate statement-making trend, without being over the top," says Tinu.She says that the mirror finish is achieved by using chrome powders or metallic polishes like Mylee's Cushion Powder Pen or 'Access All Areas' Gel Polish. Mirror nails are available in various shades including silver, gold, and rose gold. A popular shade for 2025 is Tiffany Blue which has been a symbol of elegance since 1837. Julia says that "Less is more" for 2025 when it comes to nails, with clean nails featuring sheer or barely-there polish in ballerina pinks, milky whites, and soft nudes.Tinu predicts that glazed donut nails will be upgraded this year, with warm cinnamon-brown bases having light pearl undertones replaced. To achieve the look, affordable options like Mylee's Gel Polish can be used. Embellished nails featuring nail piercings, pearls, and jewels are a trend for 2025. Abstract designs are gaining popularity, allowing for creative expression through unique, runway-ready looks.Tinu also predicts that plum nails will replace reds in 2025, bringing sophistication to manicures. She suggests looking for shades combining deep purples with neutral tones for the perfect finish. Oyster nails will be a playful design trend this year, inspired by the sea and featuring shimmering, pearlescent reflections.Julia highlights three top shapes for 2025: Short Soft Square, Medium Almond, and Long Square. She finds short soft square nails to be stylish and manageable, while also being biased towards shorter nail lengths.Nail trends for 2025 are shapin up to be somethin special, accordin' to expert Tinu Bello. She says almond-shaped nails will still be popular, but with a twist - they'll be shorter and more subtle than the long, vampy styles of the past. "We'll see a lot of almond shapes, but the length will go from long to medium," she explains.For those lookin' for an elegant, elongated look, almond-shaped nails are a great choice. To achieve this shape, you can use a nail file at a 45-degree angle and taper into a point. Then, gently soften the tip of the nail.But if you're feelin' bold, long square nails are makin' a comeback. "Square nails enhance a longer, narrow nail bed and provide a greater surface area for nail art," says Lauren Williams from London Grace. This classic shape is versatile and perfect for intricate art or making a statement.2025's nail trends are all about puttin' fun back into our manicures while still keepin' things minimal. You can expect to see nail art, textures, and unique finishes, as well as unexpected twists on timeless shades. Brown tones, in particular, will be big this year, with mocha mousse being Pantone's colour of the year. So, whether you're lookin' for somethin elegant or bold, there's a nail trend for everyone in 2025. Just remember to have fun and experiment with different styles!Nails remain a firm favourite, even with warmer months ahead. Lynn Mason, Mavala's in-house nail expert, notes that rich, vampy reds will continue to be popular in 2025, suitable for both glossy and matte finishes depending on personal style. To prevent staining or leaching, use a base coat or opt for a natural polish.Micro nail art is another trending style, made famous by celebrities like Hailey Bieber and Zoe Kravitz. This trend involves creating sculptural, 3D designs using gel sculptures, with millie Sanscartier predicting more avant-garde and abstract designs in the future.In addition to these trends, advanced shine manicures will also make a comeback in 2025. These feature cutting-edge formulas and textures that go beyond traditional crme or pigmented colours, incorporating innovative technology to create unique finishes.Fans of the glazed doughnut manicure will love the update for 2025, which features a softer, velvet-like texture created using magnetised polish. This cat-eye design mimics the reflection in a cat's eye and pairs well with darker or more vibrant shades.The naked manicure is also here to stay, focusing on natural-looking, healthy nails through quality products and treatments. Regular cuticle care, nail strengtheners, and daily cuticle oil application will help improve nail health and prolong the length of your manicure.Nails shine just as well without polish, too.7 Mermaid NailsTo get ready for holiday nail inspiration, make sure you have plenty of mermaid- and ocean-inspired looks on your moodboard, with Pinterest reporting a +65% increase in searches for 'sea-inspired nails' recently. This can be achieved through shades like pastel blues, teals, or seaweed greens, or finishes that mimic the underwater world.Capturing the mystique of the ocean, iridescent pearl nails produce a luminous effect that changes with lighting, says Tinu. To perfect this ethereal look, try light pink, green, and blue hues.Subtly sparkly nails are predicted to be trending year-round as an elegant update to minimalist designs. Emille suggests using ultra-fine glitter polish to create a body oil effect for a glossy finish. To achieve this, layer a sheer coat of glitter over jelly polish to add depth, texture, and a multifaceted look that's set to gain massive popularity in 2025.9 Lavender MilkFor those who prefer classic nails but want an update for 2025, lavender milk nails offer the perfect solution. This trend sits between milky-white and soft-lilac shades, providing a cooler tone that's both unexpected yet easy to wear.Lavender milk offers a fun twist on the traditional milky nail trend, says Lynn. To recreate the look, try combining creamy white and barely-there lilac tones to stay ahead of 2025s trends.
